LISA CAMPBELL-MOTTON is Director of Placement Permanency & Quality Assurance (PPQA) in the Probation-Child Welfare division of the Los Angeles County Probation Department. She oversees the Probation Department’s participation in the California Child and Family Services Review (C-CFSR) and implementation of the countywide System Improvement Plan (SIP), along with Los Angeles County child welfare partners. Her PPQA team conducts Case Reviews, Family Finding, Adoption Assessments, Group Home Monitoring, Compliance Investigations, Child Abuse Investigations, and Relative/Non-Relative Extended Family Member (NREFM) Home Assessments. Mrs. Campbell-Motton works with both internal and external stakeholders to improve outcomes for probation foster youth in the areas of safety, well-being, and permanency. She, her PPQA Team, Bench Officers, and her colleagues in both child welfare and probation foster care finalized the first adoption in delinquency court and have gone on to complete three more, which are four (4) of seven (7) completed in the entire state. Her passion is seeing children achieve a place they can forever call home, no matter what their age.

KAREN CANNATA is a Supervising Research Analyst with the Center for Families, Children & the Courts and has been with the Judicial Council since 1989. Before joining CFCC, Ms. Cannata worked in the Judicial Council's Information Services Division, where she managed trial and appellate court statistical reporting. Ms. Cannata began her Judicial Council career with the Statewide Office of Family Court Services, where she worked on the first Snapshot Study, a longitudinal study of California child custody mediation. She co-authored several articles published in the Family and Conciliation Courts Review and Family Court Review. Since joining CFCC in 2007, Ms. Cannata has managed a variety of research and technology projects to improve access to the courts for families and children. Ms. Cannata earned a bachelor's degree in psychology from University of California, Davis. Away from work, she enjoys time with her family.

HON. TANI GORRE CANTIL-SAKAUYE is the 28th Chief Justice of California. She was sworn into office on January 3, 2011, and is the first Asian-Filipina American and the second woman to serve as the state's chief justice. After former Governor Arnold Schwarzenegger nominated her as Chief Justice on July 22, 2010, the California State Bar Judicial Nominees Evaluation Commission rated her as exceptionally well qualified for the position. At a public hearing on August 25, 2010, she was unanimously confirmed by the Commission on Judicial Appointments, and in a general election on November 2, 2010, an overwhelming majority of voters elected her to that position. Chief Justice Cantil-Sakauye chairs the Judicial Council of California, the administrative policymaking body of the state courts, and the Commission on Judicial Appointments. She has served for more than 20 years on California appellate and trial courts, and has been appointed or elevated to higher office by three governors. In 1990, Governor George Deukmejian appointed her to the Sacramento Municipal Court and in 1997, Governor Pete Wilson elevated her to the Superior Court of Sacramento County. On the superior court, she presided over both criminal and civil assignments. In 1997, she established and presided over the first court in Sacramento dedicated solely to domestic violence issues. In addition, then-Judge Cantil-Sakauye chaired the court's criminal law committee and was a member of the presiding judge's task force on domestic violence and the Home Court committee. In 2005, Governor Schwarzenegger nominated her to the Court of Appeal, Third Appellate District. Chief Justice Ronald M. George appointed her to the Judicial Council of California in September 2008. She has also served as chair of the council's Advisory Committee on Financial Accountability and Efficiency for the Judicial Branch, a member of the Domestic Violence Practice and Procedure Task Force and chair of its Best Practices Domestic Violence subcommittee, vice-chair of the Executive and Planning Committee, vice-chair of the Rules and Projects Committee, cochair of the Judicial Recruitment and Retention Working Group, and a member of the Commission for Impartial Courts Implementation Committee. The Chief Justice was a Special Master, selected by the Supreme Court of California to hear disciplinary proceedings before the Commission on Judicial Performance. She was president of the Anthony M. Kennedy American Inn of Court, an organization dedicated to promoting civility, ethics, and professionalism in the practice of law. Born in 1959 in Sacramento, Chief Justice Cantil-Sakauye attended C.K. McClatchy High School (1977) and Sacramento City College (1978) before receiving her Bachelor of Arts with honors from the University of California, Davis, in 1980. After taking a year off to visit her ancestral homeland, the Philippines, the Chief Justice entered the UC Davis, Martin Luther King, Jr., School of Law in 1981. After receiving her Juris Doctor in 1984, she worked as a deputy district attorney for the Sacramento County District Attorney's Office, where she prosecuted a variety of criminal offenses. In 1988, she served on the senior staff of Governor Deukmejian in two capacities: as deputy legal affairs secretary and as deputy legislative secretary. Chief Justice Cantil-Sakauye is a former board member of several nonprofit organizations and has been active in numerous professional community organizations, including membership in the California Judges Association, the National Asian Pacific American Bar Association, and the Sacramento Asian Bar Association, from which she received the Filipina of the Year Award. She is currently a member of the Board of Directors of the national Conference of Chief Justices and the Board of Visitors for UC Davis, serves as an honorary member of the Foundation for Democracy and Justice, a private nonprofit organization devoted to civics education, and is actively engaged in a civic learning initiative, Your Constitution: The Power of Democracy.

BRIAN CAPRA is a Senior Staff Attorney at Public Counsel in Los Angeles. Since 2007, he has directed a unique program at Public Counsel, advocating for children with developmental disabilities in the foster care and probation systems. Prior to joining Public Counsel, Brian worked at Disability Rights California for over six years as a Clients Rights Advocate. His expertise lies in technical aspects of the law, including Regional Centers, Medi-Cal and other public benefits, and the intersection of disability rights with the dependency system. Brian has participated in several successful system reform cases, including one resulting in over $1.6 million in retroactive benefits to 50 adoptive families, and another restoring the availability of critical autism treatment services for over 2,000 children. He earned his bachelor's degree from San Francisco State University and his J.D. from the UCLA School of Law.

SARAH WEST CARSON, MSW, LCSW, is a San Francisco–area psychotherapist, community-based social worker, and Program Manager of One Family at Community Works West. Over the past 12 years, Ms. Carson has worked as a psychotherapist in Oakland, Boston, and London. Her clinical work focuses on the treatment of trauma survivors and marginalized individuals, children, and families, including refugees and internally displaced persons. As a clinician, Ms. Carson has worked in schools, police stations, hospitals, and community settings. Her research interests include multi-generational systems involvement, cross-cultural mental health, and resilience processes. Ms. Carson has consulted programs both nationally and internationally, providing assessment, training, and program development in child and adult mental health, community violence, and public health. Throughout her work, she employs a strength-based approach to supporting individuals and communities. She currently manages family clinical services in the San Francisco County Jails for One Family, providing family-strengthening clinical services to incarcerated parents and their families that begin in-jail and continue post-release. Working as part of a team delivering a range of case-managed services, One Family partners with the San Francisco Sheriff's Department, San Francisco Department of Probation, San Francisco Human Services Agency, and numerous community-based organizations.

HENRY CASTILLO is currently a District Representative for California State Senator Connie M. Leyva. After completing his degree, Mr. Castillo joined the Obama for America campaign as a Deputy Field Organizer in Las Vegas, Nevada. The following year, Mr. Castillo was selected to the 2009–2010 California Senate Fellows class, where he was assigned to then-California State Senator Alex Padilla’s capital office. Upon successful completion of his fellowship year, Mr. Castillo attended and graduated from the University of California, Hastings College of the Law. Mr. Castillo currently resides in Rialto, California, with his wife and young daughter.

ELIZABETH CAUFFMAN, PhD, is Professor and Chancellor’s Fellow in the Department of Psychology and Social Behavior in the School of Social Ecology at the University of California, Irvine (UCI). She holds courtesy appointments in the School of Education and the School of Law. Dr. Cauffman received her PhD in Developmental Psychology from Temple University and completed a post-doctoral fellowship at the Center on Adolescence at Stanford University. At the broadest level, Dr. Cauffman’s research addresses the intersection between adolescent development and juvenile justice. She has published over 100 articles, chapters, and books on a range of topics in the study of contemporary adolescence, including adolescent brain development, risk-taking and decision-making, parent-adolescent relationships, and juvenile justice. Most recently, findings from Dr. Cauffman’s research were incorporated into the American Psychological Association’s amicus briefs submitted to the U.S. Supreme Court in Roper v. Simmons (2005), which abolished the juvenile death penalty, and in both Graham v. Florida (2010) and Miller v. Alabama (2012), which placed limits on the use of life without parole as a sentence for juveniles. As part of her larger efforts to help research inform practice and policy, she served as a member of the MacArthur Foundation’s Research Network on Adolescent Development and Juvenile Justice and currently directs the Center for Psychology & Law (<http://psychlaw.soceco.uci.edu/>) at UCI.

JIMMY CHA is a solo practitioner at the Law Offices of Jimmy Cha and dedicates his practice solely to criminal defense. Mr. Cha graduated from UCLA with a degree in sociology and earned his Juris Doctor from Western State University College of Law. During law school, he interned at the Orange County Public Defender’s and Juvenile Defender’s offices. He served as a law clerk during law school and was an independent gang profiler for criminal defense attorneys. He was included in the National Trial Lawyers list of Top 100 Trial Lawyers and as a Rising Star by Super Lawyers. Mr. Cha continues to give back to the community by serving as a guest speaker on gangs, prison, drugs, and juvenile law and as a mentor to inner city youth.

LOUIE ALBERT CHAGOLLA is a member of the Anti-Recidivism Coalition (ARC) in Los Angeles. Louie was born and raised in South Central, Los Angeles, in a heavily crime and gang-infested neighborhood. Growing up, the majority of his family members were involved in gang activity or selling drugs. Louie felt he had no escape from becoming involved in destructive behaviors and crime. He was first incarcerated at 13 years old, joined a gang at 15, and remained involved in the juvenile justice system through 17 years old. His last incarceration took place when Louie was 17 years old, when he received juvenile life for an assault charge. Louie was released from incarceration on July 18, 2014, and is now an active member of the ARC. He lives at ARC's Housing Program in Sylmar, CA, and is enrolled in classes at the nearby Los Angeles Mission College. He is also employed as a Program Assistant in the Outreach and Recruitment office at Mission College. When Louie is not in school or working, he spends his time attending events and policy forums with ARC and finding ways to give back to his community and fellow young adults. Today, he is an entirely different person from the individual his former peers and family members remember, and focuses on bettering himself each and every day. He credits his mother, three younger brothers, four younger sisters, and numerous ARC brothers and sisters for helping him get to where he is today.

TIELA CHALMERS is Chief Executive Officer of the Alameda County Bar Association (ACBA) and its Volunteer Legal Services Corporation (VLSC). She has been a leader in the fields of legal services and pro bono for almost 20 years. Tiela began her career doing business litigation (and pro bono) at the firm of Farella, Braun + Martel in San Francisco. She then moved Volunteer Legal Services Program (VLSP) of the Bar Association of San Francisco, where she went from housing work to becoming the Executive Director, and had the privilege of working closely with Tanya Neiman before her untimely death. She worked for three years as a consultant for legal aid programs, law firms, other non-profits, and national organizations focusing on legal services for low-income communities. One of her larger projects involved building and coordinating the Shriver Housing Project in Los Angeles, the largest of the "civil Gideon" pilot projects in California. She also brings the Poverty Simulation (a 3-hour experiential training for pro bono attorneys and others, giving the participants a visceral understanding of our clients) to law firms, legal aid offices, law schools, and other venues. In 2014, she was named the Chief Executive Officer of the ACBA and VLSC, where she is working on several projects, including building a Legal Incubator to address the needs of modest-means clients and creating a joint pilot mediation project in unlawful detainer cases with the Alameda County Superior Court. Tiela has served as the chair of the State Bar of California Standing Committee on the Delivery of Legal Services, and currently is chair of the statewide Pro Bono Coordinating Committee. She is a frequent speaker at local, statewide, and national conferences, and has published on legal aid issues.

ROGER CHAN is the co-founder and Executive Director of East Bay Children's Law Offices (EBCLC) in Oakland, California. Mr. Chan leads a team of attorneys and social workers at EBCLC, which represents more than 2,000 children and youth every year in Alameda County Juvenile Dependency, Delinquency, and Probate Guardianship courts. From 1999 to 2009, Mr. Chan was a public defender in San Francisco and Alameda counties, where he represented youth in juvenile dependency and delinquency court. In San Francisco, he was responsible for the Public Defender's program for special education, school discipline, and post-dispositional representation. An experienced trial attorney, he also has extensive experience in working with other government and community agencies—including the Interagency Children's Policy Council of Alameda County and the San Francisco Task Force on Residential Treatment for Youth in Foster Care—to craft policies to improve the delivery of services to youth in the juvenile court system. Mr. Chan is a proud alumnus of UC Berkeley and UC Hastings College of the Law. He is a Center for Juvenile Justice Reform Fellow through the Georgetown Public Policy Institute, having completed certificates in multisystem integration and confidential information sharing. He is a member of the Executive Committee of the Pacific Juvenile Defender Center. Mr. Chan is also a member of the National Association of Counsel for Children and the California Public Defender's Association.

HON. L. MICHAEL CLARK is a Judge of the Superior Court of California, County of Santa Clara, where he has served since 2008. He currently sits in Juvenile Dependency Court, hearing cases involving child abuse and neglect, domestic violence, and substance abuse. He supervised the Family Law Division in 2012, where he conducted the domestic violence restraining order calendar and the Family Law Treatment Court calendar for parents recovering from drug addiction. From 2009–2011, he served as an all-purpose Family Court Judge. Judge Clark is a member of the Santa Clara County Child Abuse Council, chair of the Santa Clara County Domestic Violence Council's Court Systems Committee, and chair of the Superior Court's Domestic Violence Committee. Prior to his appointment to the bench in 2008, Judge Clark practiced juvenile dependency law in the trial and appellate courts for 21 years with the Santa Clara County Office of the County Counsel. He is a graduate of Santa Clara University Law School, Fuller Theological Seminary, and Westmont College.

JENNIFER KELLEHER CLOYD began representing children in the juvenile dependency system at Sacramento Child Advocates (SCA) in Sacramento, California. In 2000, Jennifer helped establish Advocates for Young Adults, a collaborative program in Sacramento County to assist youth transitioning out of the foster care system. In 2004, Ms. Kelleher Cloyd became the Directing Attorney at Legal Advocates for Children & Youth, a program of the Law Foundation of Silicon Valley. At LACY, she supervises a staff of 37 attorneys, social workers, and support staff providing legal services to children and youth in the areas of family law, guardianships, emancipation, child support, public benefits, juvenile dependency, abuse and neglect, adoption, domestic violence, and education. In 2006, Jennifer became a Certified Child Welfare Law Specialist as recognized by the National Association of Counsel for Children. Jennifer has presented at national, state, and local conferences and has served as faculty for the National Institute of Trial Advocacy in multiple trainings around the country. Jennifer received her bachelor's degree from the University of California, Los Angeles, and her Juris Doctor from the University of Minnesota Law Center.

HON. LINDA COLFAX is a Judge of the Superior Court of California, County of San Francisco. She was elected to the bench in 2010, and her current term will expire in January 2017. Judge Colfax currently hears a family law calendar in the Unified Family Court. Before her election to the bench, Judge Colfax was a San Francisco Deputy Public Defender for 13 years. She served on the Board of the ACLU of Northern California, BALIF, the Municipal Attorneys' Association, and the Golden Gate Women's Soccer League. Judge Colfax received a bachelor's degree from Harvard University and a JD from the University of Michigan Law School. She lives with her wife and children in the Bernal Heights neighborhood of San Francisco.

HON. J. RICHARD COUZENS (Ret.) served as a Judge of the Superior Court of California, County of Placer, for more than 37 years. He remains on full-time active assignment in the Assigned Judges Program. Judge Couzens was Editor in Chief of the University of California, Davis, Law Review, and was a law clerk to California Supreme Court Chief Justices Roger Traynor and Donald Wright. He has served on the California Judicial Council and the California State-Federal Judicial Council. Judge Couzens has been actively involved in many Judicial Council advisory committees. He currently is the vice-chair of the Criminal Law Standing Advisory Committee, and previously served as its chair. He has written and taught on a wide variety of topics in juvenile and criminal law. Judge Couzens is a co-author of "California Three Strikes Sentencing," "Sex Crimes: California Law and Procedure," and "Sentencing of California Crimes," published by The Rutter Group. He has been a regular member of the faculty of the B.E. Witkin Judicial College since 1995, primarily teaching felony sentencing. In 2007–2008, he was designated the on-site supervisor of the Chief Justice's special criminal trial reduction program in Riverside County. In 2008, Judge Couzens was named Jurist of the Year by the Judicial Council of California.

CAMILO CRUZ is Director of Community Justice Initiatives (CJI) for the Los Angeles City Attorney's Office. CJI includes a neighborhood-focused array of restorative justice and diversionary programs seeking to address the root causes of criminal behavior and achieve incarceration reduction. Before joining the City Attorney, Camilo served as the Community Relations Officer for the Los Angeles Superior Court. In this role, he worked closely with judicial leadership to develop programs aimed at engaging the community in the administration of justice. Prior to joining the Superior Court, Camilo was a Senior Policy Advisor to former Los Angeles City Councilmember, and current City Attorney, Mike Feuer, where he led the task force to create the first post-criminal filing Community Court program in California. Camilo grew up in a home that was deeply committed to social justice. His late father, Richard Cruz, was a historical figure in the Latino/Chicano civil rights movement, who dedicated his career as a lawyer to fighting injustices experienced by minorities and poor people throughout California. Camilo's social justice influences have translated to various justice innovation and arts projects as both full-time public administrator in the justice system and as a professional artist. Camilo received his master's degree in Public Policy (MAPP) from Claremont Graduate University. He also holds a Master of Fine Arts (MFA) degree from California State University, Long Beach. Through the production of fine art photography, he explores psychological dynamics in the space of justice. This is done through Camilo's creation of 'non-traditional' portraits of real judges, inmates, attorneys, litigants, court administrators, and law enforcement officers. Unlike 'traditional' portraiture, whereby the human figure is the main subject, Camilo's portraits emphasize the presence of institutional surroundings and the 'impressions' made by institutions onto one's selfhood as a method of communicating truth about our humanity's survival inside the American justice institution. The body language and personalities of the subjects of Camilo's artwork inspire his thinking about the role government has in dictating our emotional states, our futures, and ultimately our places in American society.

SHELLEY CURRAN is Senior Manager of Criminal Justice Services at the Judicial Council. The Criminal Justice Services office oversees and coordinates the Judicial Council's multidivisional efforts related to community corrections, the 2011 Criminal Justice Realignment, and other criminal justice activities in order to improve efficiencies and assistance to the courts, justice partners, and the public. Ms. Curran joined the staff of the Judicial Council in December 2009. Prior to coming to the Judicial Council, Ms. Curran served as Principal Consultant to the President pro Tempore of the California State Senate, where she specialized in policy and budget matters relating to public safety, the judiciary, civil rights, and consumer rights. She also spent seven years as a Policy Analyst with Consumers Union, where she advocated on behalf of low- and moderate-income consumers' credit and financial rights. Ms. Curran has a BA from Indiana University, Bloomington, and an MA in policy analysis from the University of Wisconsin, Madison.

RUTH CUSICK is a Staff Attorney in the statewide education rights practice at Public Counsel. She started her legal career in 2008 as a Skadden Fellow at Mental Health Advocacy Services, Inc., where her fellowship project focused on direct representation of students with serious mental health disabilities who suffered inappropriate and illegal disciplinary exclusions. Her fellowship policy work focused on a collaborative effort with CADRE and Public Counsel to monitor implementation of the Los Angeles Unified School District's (LAUSD) School-Wide Positive Behavior Interventions and Supports Policy in South LA. This collaborative monitoring effort led to the issuance of Redefining Dignity in Our Schools: A Shadow Report on School-Wide Positive Behavior Support Implementation in South Los Angeles, 2007–2010, and firm commitments from local school administrators to address disproportionate discipline and the lack of policy implementation. In August 2010, Ruth joined the staff of Advocates for Children of New York, where she worked on impact litigation to address school pushout and the lack of meaningful special education services in the country's largest school district. She also filed and prevailed in special education due process hearings on behalf of students who had been pushed out of school or inappropriately placed in highly restrictive education programs. In November 2011, Ruth joined Public Counsel as the lead attorney on their School Pushout Reversal Project, which focuses on meaningful local reform campaigns to ensure that policies and practices encourage young people to finish their education, rather than pushing them toward incarceration. Ruth is also one of the lead editors of the Dignity in School Campaign's Model School Code, released August 2012.

SADE DANIELS was born and raised in Oakland, California. After experiencing many trials while in the foster care system, Sade found her inner strength through literature and creative writing. She recently graduated from Philander Smith College with a Bachelor of Social Work. She currently serves with Bay Area Youth Centers as their Inaugural Residential Advisor, working with foster youth transitioning to adulthood. She also consults with the Youth Law Center and MISSEY, training on the issue of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children (CSEC).

ITAI DANOVITCH, MD, MBA, is Chair of the Department of Psychiatry and Director of Addiction Psychiatry at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center in Los Angeles. In 2011, Danovitch was selected to lead the reorganization of supportive mental health services throughout the Cedars-Sinai Health System, including inpatient medical and surgical areas, Emergency Department, Samuel Oschin Comprehensive Cancer Institute, and the Comprehensive Transplant Center. Today, the Department of Psychiatry provides clinical service, cultivates community partnerships to oversee a continuum of care, fosters quality training opportunities, and engages in collaborative health services research. Dr. Danovitch's research interests have focused on substance use disorders, particularly marijuana, as well as the integration of medical and mental health services. He was co-editor of the 2012 Psychiatric Clinics of North America special edition on addiction. He also has written on subjects ranging from the treatment of substance use disorders to the psychological concept of "quality of life." As an educator, Danovitch has been recognized with the Golden Apple Award for Excellence in Teaching. Dr. Danovitch currently serves as president of the California Society of Addiction Medicine. He also is a member of the American Academy of Addiction Psychiatry, American Society of Addiction Medicine, and is a past recipient of the American Psychiatric Association GlaxoSmithKline Fellowship for national leadership in the field of psychiatry. Most recently, he has served as a specialty consultant on marijuana to committees of the California Medical Association and the California Psychiatric Association. Dr. Danovitch earned his bachelor's degree from the University of California, Berkeley, and his medical doctorate from the UCLA School of Medicine, now called the David Geffen School of Medicine. He completed a residency at Columbia, New York Presbyterian Hospital/New York State Psychiatric Institute, an addiction psychiatry fellowship at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center, and earned a Master of Business Administration at the UCLA Anderson School of Management.

FANIA DAVIS, PhD, is Executive Director of Restorative Justice for Oakland Youth (RJOY). Coming of age in Birmingham, Alabama, during the social ferment of the civil rights era, the murder of two close childhood friends in the 1963 Sunday School bombing crystallized within Fania a passionate commitment to social transformation. For the next decades, she was active in the civil rights, Black liberation, women's, prisoners', peace, anti-racial violence, and anti-apartheid movements. After receiving her law degree from University of California, Berkeley, in 1979, Fania practiced almost 27 years as a civil rights trial lawyer. During the mid-1990's, she entered a PhD program in indigenous studies at the California Institute of Integral Studies and apprenticed with traditional healers around the globe, particularly in Africa. Since receiving her PhD in 2003, Fania has been engaged in a search for healing alternatives to adversarial justice. She has taught Restorative Justice at San Francisco's New College Law School and Indigenous Peacemaking at Eastern Mennonite University's Center for Justice and Peacebuilding. She writes and speaks on these subjects. The search for a healing justice also led Fania to bring restorative justice to Oakland. A founder and currently Executive Director of RJOY, Fania also serves as counsel to the International Council of Thirteen Indigenous Grandmothers. She recently received the Ubuntu award for service to humanity. Fania's research interests include exploring the indigenous roots, particularly the African indigenous roots, of restorative justice. Fania is also a mother of two children, a dancer, and practitioner of yoga.

TERI DEAL, M.Ed., is a Research Associate with the National Center for Juvenile Justice (NCJJ). Teri joined NCJJ in 2009 with experience working both in research settings and in direct service with youth. Ms. Deal's work at NCJJ has primarily focused on supporting and studying juvenile justice systems, departments, and programs to collect and use data. She has provided training and technical assistance, both on-site and online, to dozens of community based juvenile justice providers on incorporating continuous quality improvement (CQI) into their practices, implementing evidence-based programming, and analyzing and reporting data on disproportionate minority confinement (DMC). Currently, she manages the Multistate Study of Subsequent Offending, a five state study to advance measures for juvenile recidivism, and is staff to NCJFCJ's School Pathways to Juvenile Justice project. Ms. Deal has also been responsible for collecting, analyzing, and disseminating qualitative information in national overviews on juvenile justice topics such as the JJDP Act and the organization, administration, and practice of juvenile justice systems for OJJDP's Statistical Briefing Book as well as through the MacArthur Foundation-funded Juvenile Justice GPS (Geography, Policy, Practice & Statistics). She also managed data collection for OJJDP's National Juvenile Probation Census Project. Prior to joining NCJJ, Ms. Deal was the Education Coordinator for a nonprofit that provided prevention and intervention services to girls. There she designed and implemented an education and workforce development program, including the development and facilitation of curricula and coordination of educational opportunities across systems. At A Child's Place at Mercy, Ms. Deal was the project coordinator for a study on the cognitive and social development of youth in out-of-home placements. Ms. Deal studied Psychology and Neuroscience at the University of Pittsburgh and earned a graduate degree from the University of Virginia's Curry School of Education in 2005. She is an adjunct instructor at Carlow University, teaching Research Methods, Deviant Behavior, and Introduction to Juvenile Justice.

MELANIE DELGADO is a staff attorney with the Children's Advocacy Institute (CAI) at the University of San Diego (USD) School of Law. Ms. Delgado works on CAI grant projects, litigation, and related activities; performs research and analysis regarding CAI's legislative and regulatory policy advocacy; assists in the research and drafting of CAI special reports; and serves as an Educational Representative under appointment by the San Diego Juvenile Court. She has extensive expertise in the area of services, programs, and funding for youth aging out of the foster care system. Before joining CAI, Ms. Delgado worked as a paralegal with a San Diego law firm and volunteered with Voices for Children in the Case Assessment Program, where she reviewed the files of children under the jurisdiction of the dependency court to ensure their interests were being appropriately addressed. Ms. Delgado is a graduate of the USD School of Law, where she participated in the CAI academic program, and was a co-recipient of the James A. D'Angelo Outstanding Child Advocate Award in 2006.

LINDA DENLY is Director of the Division of Recidivism Reduction and Re-entry (DR3) in the Office of the Attorney General at the California Department of Justice. As part of the Attorney General's executive team, Ms. Denly directs efforts to curb recidivism in partnership with the state's 58 counties. Linda oversees program development, policy initiatives, innovative funding streams, and technology solutions for data analysis and tracking. She is also charged with implementing effective program evaluation models to support recidivism-reduction efforts. Under Linda's leadership, DR3 developed Back on Track—Los Angeles (BOT—LA), a first-of-its-kind evidence-based re-entry program that provides education, cognitive behavior training, and re-entry services to incarcerated men. Linda's public service career began in 1981 with the Fair Political Practices Commission, investigating alleged violations of the Political Reform Act. In 2005, she joined the Department of Justice to implement a statewide integrated criminal history archive system. ALISHA GRIFFIN is the Director of the California Department of Child Support Services (DCSS). She has been with the child support program for more than eighteen years and came to child support with many years in public and private family services, including child welfare, child protection, rehabilitation, and therapeutic service systems. From that background, Ms. Griffin brings a broad, substantial, and successful track record to her work in child support. She most recently assumed leadership of the California Child Support program after leading New Jersey for a number of years. While in New Jersey, she successfully led the design, procurement, implementation, and management of the first “second generation” national model child support automated system, including substantial pre- and post-change management strategies. It is considered one of the most successful reengineerings of a completely new system in an HHS domain. Additional focus on practice improvements and ensuring efficient and effective service delivery resulted in a comprehensive streamlining of all collections and disbursement systems and overarching fiscal management coordinated with revamping customer service through creating a centralized, “one-stop,” quality-driven service model, with comprehensive performance metrics. Ms. Griffin also has a strong portfolio of experience in direct service programming, policy analysis and development, and advocacy focused on quality service delivery to children and families. Since assuming the position as director of California DCSS, she has led the implementation of a new five-year Strategic Plan focusing on quality customer service and practice and pursuing improvements aimed at increasing the regularity and reliability of support for California’s children. This new Strategic Plan is being implemented at the county and state levels through the development of Practice and Performance Improvement Plans. Additionally, the state office is undertaking a rigorous assessment of its systems and business aimed at ensuring that it can adapt and meet the needs of its families in the ever changing service environment. Ms. Griffin has chaired, participated in, and worked on many national workgroups; she has designed several model programs in the child support and child welfare arenas. She has served as President of the National Child Support Enforcement Association (NCSEA) and the National Council of Child Support Directors (NCCSD). She was recently elected NCSEA Treasurer and serves on its International and Policy and Government Relations committees. She serves on the Executive Council of NCCSD and the chair of the subcommittee on Intergovernmental Practice which is addressing issues related to child support with the implementation of the UIFSA 2008. She represented NCSEA for all five years as a member of the delegation to the Hague Private Law Convention on Child Maintenance and Family Support and served as an observer/program advisor to NCCSUL on the revisions to UIFSA to incorporate the new convention into US laws. Because of her expertise she was invited to testify to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on the Hague Convention and its benefits to the US children and families. She is continuing to work with the Permanent Bureau at The Hague on iSupport and the international case management system. Ms. Griffin has master’s degrees in both Clinical and Community Psychology. She continues to have a strong commitment to preserving and strengthening families.

She also consults on tribal policy projects with the California Department of Social Services (CDSS). Ms. Hussey serves as the Chair of the Workgroup to Eliminate Disparities & Disproportionality, an interstate agency workgroup, and as a lead in the CDSS Racial Impact Workgroup, which is piloting a project designed to address implicit bias and create organizational culture change.

ALEXANDER JACKSON is a member of the Santa Cruz Teen Peer Court. Alexander hopes to stand at the forefront of civic engagement in his community. He has spent the last year engaging in activities that deepen his overall understanding of youth issues: conducting research, developing projects, and strengthening the analytical skills required for successful youth advocacy. A calculated risk taker with a willingness to learn new things, Jackson has championed an arts-focused teen program at his local museum, helping attract hundreds of youth to creative expression. He is currently linking advocates and students in his community to dialogue on youth violence prevention. Helping embrace the core values of humility, pragmatism, and innovation, his outlook encourages us not to think of youth as inexperienced or naive, but rather as the generation that, despite unsurmountable odds, is fearless in its quest toward shaping the society of the coming century.

KRISTEN M. JACKSON is a Senior Staff Attorney in the Immigrants' Rights practice at Public Counsel. She represents asylum seekers in affirmative and defensive cases. ANNA JOHNSON is a Policy Analyst at the National Center for Youth Law. She is the lead analyst for NCYL's work to reduce the overmedication of foster youth and improve access to community and therapeutic services for youth. With her Master of Public Policy from UC-Berkeley, Anna works with young adults and current foster youth to ensure that their voices influence policies affecting foster youth. Her passion for this work originated from 6 years of classroom experience in under-resourced schools. Prior to her work in policy, Anna taught at Urban Promise Academy in the Oakland Unified School District for four years, at Potter Thomas Bilingual Academy in Philadelphia, and in Madison, Wisconsin, serving homeless youth and families in the CASPER program. She witnessed how traumatic experiences, stress, poverty, and environmental factors impact children's development and relationships. Creating and maintaining a safe, supportive classroom environment was the primary focus of her work as an educator. Anna knows that providing services, care, and attention to youth who live under the daily stress of violence, poverty, and other forms of abuse can help young people build resiliency and thrive in the short and long term. Anna remains proud of her students' accomplishments and leadership in their communities. She dedicates her policy career to partnering with youth and young adults to improve the treatment of young people in schools, communities, homes, and neighborhoods. Anna also holds degrees from the University of Wisconsin-Madison (BA in Social Work) and the University of Pennsylvania (Urban Education). You can follow her @AnnaMaureen83 on Twitter.

WILLIAM KENNEDY is the Director of the Race Equity Project (REP), a program he co-founded while Managing Attorney at the Sacramento office of Legal Services of Northern California, where he practiced for 25 years. As Director of the REP, Mr. Kennedy and his former colleague Mona Tawatao developed a training curriculum for legal services attorneys that provides the essential tools of a race equity practice. For the past 10 years, the REP has provided free training to attorneys and neighborhood activists on: 1) Social Cognition and the Law; 2) Understanding Structural Racialization and the use of Racial Impact Statements; 3) Mapping and Graphic Presentations of Data; 4) Cognitive Framing; and 5) Community Lawyering. The curriculum ensures that race as an issue is squarely on throughout all of an organization's anti-poverty advocacy. Bill brings a practitioner's perspective to the discussion of cognitive science and the law. Bill Kennedy began his practice in 1974. His legal work has focused primarily on housing and civil rights. In 1978, Bill was part of the defense team that represented the Camp Pendleton 14, African American marines facing criminal charges for attacking the Ku Klux Klansmen on the base. He then spent several years doing anti-Klan and anti-poverty work in California's central valley with California Rural Legal Assistance. In the 1980s, Bill was lead counsel on three successful civil rights challenges to the police practices of the Border Patrol, which limited raids in communities, workplaces, and businesses without warrants based upon "articulable suspicion of alienage." He was trial counsel on the Rancho de Cuevas case, which defended the civil rights of farm workers recruited from Mexico to live in caves in Monterey County.

MIKE MASTERS is a Captain in the California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation (CDCR). Captain Masters began his career with CDCR in 1993; he has worked in a variety of classifications and served in institutions at every level of security. He is currently assigned to the Classification Services Unit, where he is responsible for managing the department's Youthful Offender Program (YOP). The YOP was established on July 1, 2015, in response to Assembly Bill 1276 (Stats. 2014, ch. 590), which added section 2905 to the California Penal Code (PC). PC 2905 requires CDCR to afford special classification consideration for youthful offenders committed to CDCR before reaching 22 years of age. Offenders found appropriate for the Youthful Offender Program are placed at or transferred to lower security level institutions, allowing them greater access to programs with the goal of increasing their likelihood of rehabilitation. Captain Masters has been involved with the YOP from its inception. He was instrumental in its development and continues to oversee its implementation.

REV. BEN McBRIDE is Regional Director of Clergy Development with PICO California, the state's largest faith-based community organizing network. Ben is a native of San Francisco and a longtime activist for peace and justice in the bay area. As an advocate for youth, he served as a member of the crisis counseling team for West Contra Costa Unified School District and as Program Director for Global Education Partnership, empowering at-risk youth through entrepreneurship. Ben has a history of spiritual leadership, beginning as a youth pastor and continuing through his years as collegiate pastor for Greater St. Paul Baptist Church and Shiloh Church. In 2012, Ben was instrumental, as co-chair of the steering committee, in relaunching the first successful iteration of Operation Ceasefire: a data-driven communication strategy to reduce gun violence. Operation Ceasefire's strategy has contributed to a near 40 percent reduction in homicides over the past two years. In late 2014, Ben became the primary non-police trainer for the Oakland Police Department's Procedural Justice & Police Legitimacy Course. Though the course is facilitated nationally, Ben is the sole community participant currently providing training and consultation to police departments nationwide. He is deeply committed to rebuilding the relationship between the community and police departments through reform and practice. Ben was a leading voice in PICO California for the Proposition 47 campaign to restructuring laws to create more opportunities for treatment of those diseased with addiction. He provides ongoing technical assistance for violence reduction, along with reintegration strategies, statewide and nationally. Ben has received many honors, including the FRED Scholars Award, the ONGB Non-Profit Leader of the Year, the Oakland Police Foundation's Neighborhood Champion Award, and the ASIS Community Policing Award.

MICHAEL MINOR is Director of the Division of Juvenile Justice (DJJ) of the California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation. He was appointed as Director in March 2012 by Governor Edmund G. Brown, Jr. Mr. Minor started his career as an entry-level Correctional Officer in 1986, and during his 29 years of service he has worked in numerous capacities, including Superintendent, Major, Captain, Lieutenant and Sergeant. As Director, he is responsible for overseeing the state's three (3) secure facilities and one fire camp for juvenile offenders. As part of the State's juvenile justice system, DJJ provides services to the most high-risk/high-need youth. Director Minor has led the DJJ through some of its most challenging years. Prior to becoming Director, the State had entered into a legal settlement to reform its system. The resulting consent decree was described by the Court expert as one of the most far-reaching remedial plans in American juvenile justice history. Since assuming leadership, Director Minor has successfully removed the DJJ from court oversight in health care, dental care, education, disability rights, and effective programs for sex offenders. He has provided leadership and oversight during the Division's implementation of a cognitive behavioral approach to assessing, understanding, and treating youth, known as the Integrated Behavior Treatment Model. His guidance has also led to major improvements in mental health care, the DJJ's last remaining remedial plan, which he hopes to close shortly, ending over a decade of litigation. Mr. Minor earned a Bachelor of Arts in Criminal Justice from The Union Institute & University, Sacramento, and is a graduate of the United States Army Non-Commissioned Officer's Academy.

SHANNON PRICE MINTER is the Legal Director of the National Center for Lesbian Rights (NCLR), one of the nation's leading advocacy organizations for lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender people. Shannon was lead counsel for same-sex couples in the landmark California marriage equality case which held that same-sex couples have the fundamental right to marry and that laws that discriminate based on sexual orientation are inherently discriminatory and subject to the highest level of constitutional scrutiny. In 2009, Shannon was named a California Lawyer of the Year by California Lawyer. In 2008, he was named among six Lawyers of the Year by Lawyers USA and among California's Top 100 Lawyers by the legal publication The Daily Journal. He also received the 2008 Dan Bradley Award from the National Gay and Lesbian Bar Association for outstanding work in marriage cases and was the recipient of the Cornell Law School Exemplary Public Service Award. In 2005, Shannon was one of 18 people to receive the Ford Foundation's "Leadership for a Changing World" award. In 2004, he was awarded an Honorary Degree from the City University of New York School of Law for his advocacy on behalf of same-sex couples and their families. Shannon serves on the boards of Faith in America and the Transgender Law & Policy Institute. He has previously served on the American Bar Association Commission on Sexual Orientation and Gender Identity. Shannon received his J.D. from Cornell Law School in 1993.

From 2003 until 2012, he was a board member of the Yolo County Sexual Assault and Domestic Violence Center and was board president for three years.

JAMES REDFORD makes documentaries that transform important health and environmental issues into stories that educate and inspire. With nine films to date, he's journeyed far and deep, looking at issues such as water shortage in the west, dyslexia, and the dangers of chemical flame retardants, as well as why and how chronic stress damages healthy childhood development. Inspired by his own life-saving liver transplant at the age of 30, his first HBO documentary, The Kindness of Strangers, explored the hidden heroism of donor families. James began his collaboration with Karen Pritzker on HBO's The Big Picture: Rethinking Dyslexia, a film that gave hope to millions of families around the world who have struggled to educate their dyslexic children. From there, they turned their storytelling eye on the hidden menace of adverse childhood experiences. Paper Tigers, currently on the festival and screening circuit, will air on PIVOT TV near the end of 2015. James also cofounded and is current Chair of the Redford Center, a film-production nonprofit that tells inspiring human stories about complex environmental challenges. HBO's Happening—the center's fourth film and James's fifth for HBO—takes us on an oft-humorous "Clean Energy Tour for Dummies" that opens the door to new solutions and real hope. Recent honors include the 2014 WildCare Environmental Award and service both as a 2015 filmmaker envoy for USC/US State Department's American Film Showcase and in the leadership circle for the UN's second annual Media for Social Impact Summit. James is also a relapsed rock 'n' roll guitarist who plays the best dives in the San Francisco bay area with Olive and the Dirty Martinis. He lives in Marin County with his wife, Kyle Redford.

ANNE MARIE SCHUBERT, is the District Attorney of Sacramento County. She is a career prosecutor with 25 years of law enforcement experience. As a Sacramento County prosecutor, Anne Marie sent some of the area’s most notorious and dangerous criminals—murderers, rapists, and child molesters—to state prison. She has also created innovative programs for the District Attorney’s Office focused on catching killers and criminals using DNA evidence, helping the children of our community by combatting truancy, and honoring citizens who have provided service to justice with the development of the annual Outstanding Citizen Awards. Anne Marie has received the Prosecutor of the Year Award and the POST ICI Instructor of the Year Award. One of Anne Marie’s passions is the pursuit of justice through forensic DNA evidence and cold case prosecution. She formed the DA’s Cold Case Prosecution Unit in 2002, and served as its first prosecutor. She is nationally recognized as a forensic DNA expert. Anne Marie was elected Sacramento County’s District Attorney in 2014 with the support of former District Attorney Jan Scully, Sheriff Scott Jones, law enforcement associations, and crime victims’ organizations. She was sworn into office in January 2015.

CASEY SCHUTTE is an attorney and Director of FosterEd: California, an initiative of the National Center for Youth Law (NCYL). Previously, he was the Project Manager for FosterEd: Santa Cruz County, where he led FosterEd’s efforts to improve the educational outcomes of the county’s students in foster care. Casey began his social services career in 2006 in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, as a case manager at a foster care agency. He went on to direct the agency’s treatment foster care program, working to provide a nurturing and therapeutic family environment to children who would otherwise have been placed in an institutional setting. Casey returned to graduate school in 2009 to pursue degrees in law and public policy. As a graduate student in his dual degree program, Casey interned with NCYL; Legal Services for Children; the Judicial Council of California's Center for Families, Children & the Courts; and the Office of the Child Advocate in Boston, Massachusetts. In his master's thesis for his public policy program, Casey explored the outlier status of the timeline to adjudication in Massachusetts child welfare cases. Casey earned his Master of Social Work degree from the University of Wisconsin, Madison, in 2006, and his dual JD/MPP degree in law and public policy in 2013 from the University of California, Berkeley, School of Law and Harvard's Kennedy School of Government.

ANGIE SCHWARTZ is the Policy Director at the Alliance for Children's Rights, where she works to improve the welfare of children living in poverty and in foster care through systemic reforms. Angie has been instrumental in passage of several key reforms, including the extension of foster care to age 21, creation of a new state-only funding system for kinship foster parents, and development of a screening and application process to improve foster youth's access to Social Security benefits. Angie earned her BA, magna cum laude, from American University, and her JD with distinction from Stanford Law School.

HON. SHAWNA M. SCHWARZ is a Judge of the Superior Court of California, County of Santa Clara. Judge Schwarz received her bachelor's and master's degrees from Stanford University and then went on to Santa Clara University for law school. She spent seven years as the Directing Attorney at Legal Advocates for Children & Youth, where she represented children in guardianship, emancipation, education and other legal matters. She was appointed Commissioner of the Juvenile Dependency Court in December of 2001, where she presided over the cases of abused and neglected children in Santa Clara County. In May 2006, Governor Arnold Schwarzenegger appointed Judge Schwarz as a Superior Court Judge for Santa Clara County. Judge Schwarz briefly presided over a misdemeanor calendar before being transferred to Family Court. In Family Court, Judge Schwarz presided over a specialized restraining order calendar, hearing domestic violence, elder abuse, civil harassment, and workplace violence restraining orders. Judge Schwarz returned to Dependency Court in January 2009 and is currently the Supervising Judge. Her current caseload has an emphasis on teenagers as well as children in long-term foster care with little hope of ever returning home. She has a specialized Teen Court calendar in which at-risk and struggling teens come to court for extended hearings in an informal setting to talk about what's going on and problem solve with interested professionals. In addition to her caseload, Judge Schwarz has created numerous "cheat sheets" and flow charts used by judges statewide. She also provides trainings on juvenile dependency, domestic violence, and restraining orders. She has trained over 1,000 social workers, community-based organization staff, and community members on the overlap of domestic violence and child maltreatment. Since January 2004, Judge Schwarz has provided training on the Juvenile Dependency Court process for all the new CASA classes for the Child Advocates of Silicon Valley. Judge Schwarz has co-taught the Primary Assignment Orientation for Juvenile Dependency bench officers since 2010.

HON. DARRELL STEINBERG (Ret.) is one of the most respected political leaders in California, having most recently served as President pro Tem of the State Senate from 2008 to 2014. His more than twenty-year career in public service also included six years in both the State Assembly and the Sacramento City Council. Over the course of his legislative tenure, Steinberg forged difficult agreements to usher the state from a $42 billion deficit to a budget surplus, implement groundbreaking mental health care legislation, strengthen the state's foster care system, improve K–12 education standards, reform the statewide ballot initiative, and make historic investments in California's water and transportation infrastructure. While his resume lists achievements in multiple areas, advancing mental health care policy has always been among Steinberg's top priorities. Some of his most well-known contributions include Proposition 63, which provides over one billion dollars per year for mental health care, and SB 946, a groundbreaking law that ensures insurance companies cover treatment of children with autism and related disorders. In 2015, Darrell established The Steinberg Institute for Advancing Mental Health Policy. The Steinberg Institute aims to build legislative leadership to uphold California's promise to build a full network of community services and support for people living with mental illness and related disorders. He serves as Professor and Director of Policy and Advocacy at the UC Davis Behavioral Health Center of Excellence. Darrell is currently a shareholder at Greenberg Traurig LLP, where he serves as Chair of the firm's California Government Law & Policy Practice.

He previously served as general counsel at the Santa Monica Rent Control Board from 1989 to 1998, supervising attorney at the Los Angeles Office of County Counsel from 1987 to 1989, and as a partner at Rose, Klein and Marias from 1983 to 1986. Judge Trendacosta received his BA from California State University, Northridge, and his JD from the University of La Verne. He is a member of the Center for Judicial Education & Research Juvenile Law Curriculum Committee.

ROCHELLE TROCHTENBERG is the Lead Youth Organizer with the Humboldt County Transition Age Youth Collaboration. Rochelle is a dedicated youth advocate, community organizer, and former foster youth working to improve the system for other youth. She has spent the last eight years pouring her heart and soul into the Humboldt County Transition Age Youth Collaboration; leading the organization's efforts to implement a robust, youth-led policy and advocacy program. As the Lead Youth Organizer, Rochelle has acted as a leader and mentor, engaging youth with experience in foster care, mental health issues, juvenile justice, and homelessness to bring their voices and experiences to policy-setting and decision-making tables throughout various systems. Rochelle is an outspoken advocate who strives to improve systems by helping young people understand the policy, politics, and impacts of laws, as well as how to navigate and leverage their power to shape the political conversation. Rochelle believes that systems function more effectively when decisions are informed and connected to the real-life experiences and voices of those who depend on them. Rochelle believes that being instrumental in facilitating youths' involvement in political activism is a potent form of direct service and she is dedicated to working with youth to create dynamic system change. Rochelle has worked with a number of groups across California to effectively engage youth in policy, program design, and system improvement efforts. Rochelle has dedicated herself to a number of statewide efforts, such as serving as a former foster youth representative on the Katie A. Joint Management Task Force and Co-Chair of the Katie A. Community Mental Health Team, working on the California State Quality Improvement Project to Improve the Use of Psychotropic Medication Amongst Foster Youth, and serving on the California Child Welfare Council since 2010. Additionally, Rochelle was a founding Board Member and Secretary for Youth In Mind, serving from 2010 to 2013, and has served for three terms on the Board of Directors for California Mental Health Advocates for Children and Youth (CMHACY). Rochelle's life goal is to transform the child welfare and mental health systems for children and families.

SUSAN F. TURNER, PhD, is a Professor in the Department of Criminology, Law, and Society at the University of California, Irvine. She also serves as Director of the Center for Evidence-Based Corrections, an appointee of the President of the University of California to the California Rehabilitation Oversight Board (C-ROB), and member of California's Bureau of State and Community Corrections (BSCC) committees. She received her MA and PhD in Social Psychology from the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill. She led a variety of research projects while she was a Senior Behavioral Scientist at the RAND Corporation, including studies on racial disparity, field experiments of private sector alternatives for serious juvenile offenders, work release, day fines and a 14-site evaluation of intensive supervision probation. Dr. Turner's areas of expertise include the design and implementation of randomized field experiments and research collaborations with state and local justice agencies. At UCI, she has assisted the California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation in the development and validation of a risk assessment tool as well as evaluations of targeted parole programs and prison population forecasting. Most recently, she has been involved in several evaluations of the impact of California's realignment on state and county justice systems. Dr. Turner also served as a member of the RAND project team that recently investigated the effectiveness of correctional academic and career technical education programs for juveniles and adults. Dr. Turner is a member of the American Society of Criminology and the American Probation and Parole Association, and a Fellow of the Academy of Experimental Criminology. She is past Chair of the Division of Corrections and Sentencing and current chair of the Division of Experimental Criminology of the American Society of Criminology.

HAYLEY UPSHAW is a Senior Staff Attorney at Legal Services for Children in San Francisco. Hayley joined LSC in August 2008 when she was awarded an Equal Justice Works fellowship to represent unaccompanied immigrant youth in the Bay Area. After her fellowship ended, Hayley continued with LSC as a staff attorney. PROPHET WALKER is a founding member of the Anti-Recidivism Coalition (ARC) and the co-founder of Watts United Weekend. When Prophet was just a child, his mother succumbed to a heroin addiction, leading him and his sister to live with their father in Watts. Prophet struggled throughout his childhood with staying in school and out of trouble. At 16 years old, he was sentenced to six years in prison for assault, stemming from a fight with other teenagers. While serving his time in juvenile hall, before being transferred to the adult prison system, Prophet vowed to turn his life around. While incarcerated, he helped start an educational program that offers other incarcerated young people the opportunity to earn a two-year college degree on the inside. More than 100 of the program's graduates, including Prophet himself, have left prison and enrolled in four-year colleges. Prophet recently graduated from Loyola Marymount University with a degree in Civil Engineering and is currently a consulting engineer to the Jordan Downs Redevelopment Project in Watts. Last year, Prophet ran for the California Assembly in the 64th district, which includes Watts, Compton, Carson, and North Long Beach. In addition to his professional success, Prophet continues to give back to his community and serve as an example to many young men caught up in the justice system. Prophet is the co-founder of Watts United Weekend, which brings together young residents of local public housing projects before they turn into gang rivals. He is also a founding member of the ARC, which serves as a support network for formerly incarcerated young people and provides reentry services to help individuals succeed after incarceration.

HON. VAUGHN R. WALKER (Ret.) was a Judge on the United States District Court for the Northern District of California from 1990 to 2011. He served as Chief Judge of the court from 2004 to 2010. Judge Walker graduated from the University of Michigan in 1966. He worked briefly at the Securities & Exchange Commission and was a Woodrow Wilson Fellow in Economics at the University of California, Berkeley. He studied law at the University of Chicago and Stanford University, receiving a JD in 1970. From 1971 to 1972, Judge Walker was a law clerk to the Honorable Robert J. Kelleher of the United States District Court in Los Angeles. From 1972 to 1990, he practiced law with Pillsbury Madison & Sutro (now Pillsbury Winthrop Shaw Pittman) in San Francisco, becoming a partner in 1978. In 2010, Judge Walker presided over Perry v. Schwarzenegger, a challenge to California Proposition 8, which amended the state constitution to define marriage as a union between a man and a woman and precluded the state from recognizing marriages between same-sex couples. Judge Walker found that Proposition 8 failed to advance any rational basis in singling out gay men and lesbians for denial of a marriage license, did nothing more than enshrine in the state constitution the notion that opposite-sex couples are superior to same-sex couples, and prevented California from fulfilling its constitutional obligation to provide marriages on an equal basis. Judge Walker found Proposition 8 invalid and ruled it unconstitutional. In 2013, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that the Proposition 8 proponents did not have standing to appeal the district court ruling, and thus Judge Walker's opinion was left intact.

ROB WARING is a staff attorney at the East Bay Children's Law Offices (EBCLCLO). His recent law review article, Is the Privacy of Therapy a Secret to Foster Children?, resulted in California SB 1407, legislation enacted in 2012 to ensure that parents cannot obtain mental health information about children removed from their care without court approval. He has an AB in Political Economy from Princeton University and a JD from the University of San Francisco School of Law, where he organized a conference assessing the legacy of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. Prior to joining EBCLCLO, he represented foster children for the Alameda County Public Defender's Office. JULIA WEBER, JD, MSW, was born in Washington, DC, learned to walk in Hawaii, was raised in Arizona, attended Washington University in St. Louis, and has lived in San Francisco and worked for the Judicial Council since 1999. As part of the Center for Families, Children & the Courts (CFCC), she serves as co-counsel to the Family and Juvenile Law Advisory Committee and works on several family law, child custody, mediation, and court coordination projects. Ms. Weber has served as lead staff on developing rules and forms regarding mediation, domestic violence, and children's participation in court, and has trained (and learned from) many California mediators and evaluators over her 16 years with CFCC. Prior to joining the council, she worked as a mediator and represented children in St. Louis County's family court in addition to serving as the first project coordinator for St. Louis's Family Violence Council. She has taught university courses on race, gender, and law and violence against women and, in her spare time, is learning to play the ukulele and enjoying coparenting her amazing teenage son.

HON. DAVID S. WESLEY is a Judge of the Superior Court of California, County of Los Angeles, and has recently completed his three-year term as a member of the Judicial Council. Judge Wesley devotes a great deal of time and effort to the Los Angeles County Teen Court program, an alternative early intervention court that provides an opportunity for selected juvenile offenders to be questioned, judged, and sentenced by a jury of their peers. He serves as the director of Los Angeles County Teen Court and continues to preside as a Teen Court judge for Dorsey High School Law Magnet since 1995. He is also the President of the California Association of Youth Courts, Inc. Judge Wesley has also been developing a further extension of the Los Angeles Teen Court program called SHADES (Stopping Hate and Delinquency by Empowering Students), a program implemented to help combat hate incidents and hate crimes on our high school campuses in partnership with the Museum of Tolerance.

KATHLEEN WEST, DrPH, is a public health professional with expertise working with programs serving at-risk families, maternal and child health and welfare, intergenerational trauma, and public mental health and addiction issues. Dr. West's education includes degrees in biology and anthropology from Kalamazoo College, MI, and master's and doctoral degrees from the UCLA School of Public Health. Based in Los Angeles and Geneva throughout her career, Dr. West has worked with substance abuse and mental health issues in the context of families in the judicial system for 30 years and now focuses on collaborative courts expansion. Following a UNHCR contract in Kuwait, her interests turned to work with US and global military and veteran families to better address PTSD sequelae. She teaches classes on disaster, conflict, and global health at the USC Department of Preventive Medicine and on military families at the UCLA Department of Social Welfare. Dr. West works with maternal and child health systems in Sierra Leone, where she has studied and worked since 1976.

REBECCA WHITEHEAD is a member of the Riverside Youth Court and a 17-year-old senior at Martin Luther King High School in Riverside, CA. She has always had an interest in the law, and with her involvement in King Mock Trial, Riverside Youth Court, and the Youth Advisory Board for the California Association of Youth Courts (CAYC), her eyes have opened to a career in this field. Her passion for photography balances out the seriousness of her law-centered extracurricular activities. She is currently Editor in Chief of her school's yearbook and serving as Photography Club Public Relations Officer for the second year. She is an avid traveler and loves getting different perspectives of the world with each new place she visits. Rebecca is very excited to be a part of Beyond the Bench and is grateful for this experience.

SHANNAN WILBER is Youth Policy Director at the National Center for Lesbian Rights, where she directs policy and advocacy strategies for building awareness, compassion, and competence in public systems serving lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender youth. Before coming to the NCLR in 2013, Ms. Wilber served as Executive Director of Legal Services for Children, a nonprofit law office serving children and youth in San Francisco, for more than twelve years. She also worked as a staff attorney at the Youth Law Center in San Francisco and Directing Attorney of Legal Advocates for Children & Youth (LACY) in San Jose. Ms. Wilber has served on the Judicial Council's Family and Juvenile Law Advisory Committee and the boards of directors of the National Association of Counsel for Children, the W. Haywood Burns Institute, Bay Area Lawyers for Individual Freedom, and the NCLR. She has received awards from the American Bar Association and the NACC. Ms. Wilber graduated with high honors from Michigan State University and received her JD, cum laude, from Santa Clara University School of Law.

KYANNA WILLIAMS is an attorney with the Center of Families, Children & the Courts at the Judicial Council of California. She provides statewide subject matter expertise in the areas of access, fairness and diversity for the judicial branch and is lead counsel to the Advisory Committee on Providing Access and Fairness. Ms. Williams is a former member of the State Bar of California's Counsel on Access and Fairness (COAF) and is now the Judicial Council's liaison to COAF. Before joining the Judicial Council, Ms. Williams worked for the non-profit law firm, Legal Services of Northern California (LSNC). After a number of years practicing law with LSNC's Solano county office, she became managing attorney of the firm's Shasta regional office. Kyanna's clients were low-income residents of Lassen, Modoc, Siskiyou, Shasta, and Trinity counties and her primary practice areas were housing law, public benefits law, and disability rights. Having worked with clients in urban, suburban and rural communities, she developed deep respect for the diversity of experiences and needs represented in California. She was also a member of the firm's Race Equity Project, where she wrote, researched, and conducted presentations on implicit bias and the intersections of race, poverty, social justice and the law. Ms. Williams was a 2014 fellow with the Shriver Center's Racial Justice Training Institute, a program to train public interest lawyers on the tools necessary for addressing race equity through anti-poverty advocacy. Ms. Williams is a member of the statewide Model Approaches Advisory Group which works to increase the availability of low-cost, high-quality legal assistance to California seniors. Ms. Williams' racial justice and anti-poverty education inform much of her access, fairness and diversity work at the Judicial Council. Ms. Williams earned her bachelor's degree and her law degree from the University of California at Davis.

Prior to joining the Bar, she was Court Executive Officer of the Superior Court of Alameda County. Prior to that, she was a Principal Analyst with the Alameda County Administrator's Office, where she held the budget responsibility for several public safety departments, and represented the County Administrator on the leadership team that oversees the implementation of criminal justice realignment in the county. Ms. Wilson also worked with the Judicial Council's Center for Families, Children & the Courts, where she oversaw juvenile court improvement initiatives. She was previously the president of the Berkeley Unified School District's Board of Education. Ms. Wilson holds a Juris Doctor and a master's degree in public policy, both from the University of California, Berkeley.

BRENDON D. WOODS is the Public Defender for Alameda County. Mr. Woods graduated from the University of California, Santa Barbara, in 1992 with a degree in Political Science and enrolled in the University of San Francisco School of Law in 1993. He knew right away that he wanted to be a public defender. While at USF, Woods interned at the State Public Defender's Office and the San Francisco Superior Court's Criminal Division. On graduating in 1996, he worked as a post-bar clerk in the Alameda County Public Defender's Office until he was hired in 1998. Since then, he has served as a Senior Assistant Public Defender, Felony Trial Staff Supervisor, Branch Office Supervisor, and Recruitment, Hiring, and Diversity Officer. On December 17, 2012, Woods was appointed Public Defender. As such, he directs 104 attorneys, 18 investigators, and numerous support staff operating out of five offices and handling more than 3,300 new cases every month. Throughout his 19-year career with the office, Woods has represented thousands of individuals, including three clients facing the death penalty—none of whom received a death verdict. He has served on the Alameda County Bar Association's Judicial Evaluation Committee and was appointed to the Judicial Council of California's Criminal Law Advisory Committee.

MARTHA WRIGHT is a Senior Court Services Analyst for Criminal Justice Services at the Judicial Council of California. She joined the Judicial Council staff in 2001 after spending several years working as a proposal development consultant to community-based nonprofits and government agencies. Ms. Wright has developed successful federal, state, and private grant applications in community development, school violence prevention, community policing, and technology opportunities. With the Judicial Council's Criminal Justice Services, she oversees the Recidivism Reduction Fund and assists with office-wide program planning, administration, and development. Before coming to CJS, she worked in the council's Planning and Effective Programs unit, where she was responsible for creating the California JusticeCorps program, a unique AmeriCorps-funded project that recruits and trains university students to work as assistants in court-based legal access self-help centers. Ms. Wright has a Bachelor of Arts in Political Science from the University of California at Davis and a master's degree in Public Administration from Sonoma State University.

BETH WRIGHTSON, LCSW, is an Adoptions Supervisor with the California Department of Social Services in a regional office that provides independent adoption services. For more than a decade and a half, she has helped families all over Northern and Central California to navigate foster care as well as both agency and independent adoptions. She has particular expertise in adoption supervision, shuttle mediation, and coordination with social workers, attorneys, judges, and court clerks to serve families of all backgrounds and diverse needs. Ms. Wrightson is passionate about demystifying the adoption process and connecting families with the resources they need to parent effectively. She previously worked in a private agency, providing foster care and adoption services, as well as supervising and directing the adoptions program for that agency. Ms. Wrightson received her Master of Social Work from the University of California, Berkeley, in 1994 and her License for Clinical Social Work in 1999.

JEFFREY ZINSMEISTER is Executive Vice President and Director of Government Affairs at Smart Approaches to Marijuana (SAM), an expert in public policy, international affairs, and government relations, with particular experience in drug policy and drug demand reduction programs. A former diplomat and international security consultant, Jeffrey joined SAM from leading management consulting firm Bain & Company, where he provided advice to Latin American governments on complex public policy matters, and assisted in their implementation. He has drafted legislation and developed political strategy supporting multi-billion-dollar public initiatives for heads of state and Cabinet-level officials. Previously, Jeffrey served as a Foreign Service Officer with the U.S. State Department. During that time, he spent two years at the U.S. Embassy in Mexico City directly overseeing a $55 million drug demand reduction and anti-corruption foreign assistance program. The U.S. Department of State recognized the results of his work, including the negotiation of over $14 million in new U.S.-Mexico initiatives, with citations of merit. He also handled international and commercial litigation for the California-based law firm Munger, Tolles & Olson LLP and clerked for a judge on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Eleventh Circuit. He has litigated before the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights (IACHR). A non-resident fellow at the University of Florida Drug Policy Institute, Jeffrey publishes articles on narcotics control and corruption that have appeared in leading U.S. and Mexican publications. At the invitation of the U.S. Foreign Service Institute, he has also taught classes on fraud prevention. A native of Atlanta, Georgia, he moved north to receive his AB from Harvard College and then west to earn a JD from the UC Berkeley School of Law (Boalt Hall). Beyond his native English, Jeffrey speaks fluent Portuguese and Spanish.
