EDUCATION UNITS

Certificate Distribution

The Beyond the Bench Conference consists of several programs, each with different start and end dates and times. While some programs provide individual certificates of completion indicating the continuing education (CE) hours received, not all programs will provide this documentation. Please be sure to comply with the attendance requirements explained below for the type of education credit you are seeking.

Please note: For the type and number of CE hours available, please refer to the individual session details in the Beyond the Bench program agenda.

JUDICIAL OFFICERS AND TRIAL COURT PERSONNEL

Judicial Officers:

The Beyond the Bench conference provides education credit for judicial officers pursuant to the applicable California Rules of Court, rule 10.461 et seq.

Court Executive Officers:

This conference provides credit for court executive officers pursuant to education requirements in the California Rules of Court, rule 10.473(c). A court executive officer who serves as faculty by teaching legal or judicial education to a legal or judicial audience may apply education hours as faculty service. Credit for faculty service counts toward the continuing education requirement in the same manner as all other types of education—on an hour-for-hour basis.

Court Employees and Professionals Appointed by the Court:

All conference workshops qualify for education credit for court employees and professionals appointed by the court pursuant to education requirements in the California Rules of Court, rule 10.474(c).

EDUCATION CREDIT PURSUANT TO APPLICABLE CALIFORNIA RULES OF COURT

A number of California Rules of Court include education requirements for judicial officers, court staff and court-connected professionals. Courses that satisfy those requirements are identified in this program with the appropriate rule number. A key to rules of court with education requirements follows:

- Rule 5.210(f)(1)(A)–(B), (f)(2) Court-connected child custody mediators
- Rule 5.215(j)(2) Domestic violence protocol for Family Court Services
- Rule 5.225(d), (i)(1) Appointment requirement for child custody evaluators
- Rule 5.230(d)(1)-(2) Domestic violence training standards for court-appointed child custody investigators and evaluators
- Rule 5.242 Qualifications, rights, and responsibilities of counsel appointed to represent a child in family law proceedings
- Rule 5.518(e)(3), (g) Court-connected child protection/dependency mediation
- Rule 5.660(d)(3)(A) Attorneys for parties (§§ 317, 317.5, 317.6, 353, 366.26, 16010.6)
- Rule 5.664 Training requirements for children’s counsel in delinquency proceedings (§ 634.3)
- Rule 10.464 Education requirements and expectations for judges and subordinate judicial officers on domestic violence issues

ADVANCED TRIAL SKILLS FOR DEPENDENCY ATTORNEYS

◆ MCLE ✕ CIMCE

Participants will engage in a learning-by-doing seminar on advanced trial skills. The workshop will include a short fact-pattern and lecture on advanced direct and cross examinations as well as expert testimony and the child witness.

The workshop will employ a real expert witness in the given field of study who will be available for cross examination by the participants.

Learning Objectives—Participants will be able to:

1. Improve the participants' ability to conduct direct examination.
2. Improve the participants' ability to conduct cross examination.
3. Improve the participants' ability to utilize expert witnesses on direct and cross.
4. Improve the participants' ability to direct and cross examine the child witness.

ENHANCING SAFETY AND ACCOUNTABILITY: INCORPORATING RISK ASSESSMENT INTO DV CASES (JUDGES ONLY)

◆ MCLE ◆ STC CRC 10.464

Cases involving domestic violence are often the most difficult cases for the courts. Using several adult learning techniques, this workshop will help participants identify the dynamics of domestic violence, the science of risk and risk assessment, and how the presence of domestic violence impacts various court proceedings. Participants will work together to evaluate the impact of violence on adult and child victims. Participants will identify where risk and safety information is currently gathered and shared in their current system and how to respond to barriers to safety for victims. Participants will delve deeper and apply the information gleaned from dynamics of domestic violence to focus on risk and lethality and apply that knowledge to decision-making.

Although the principles of risk assessment will be applied in the context of family court proceedings, the course content would be valuable to those in a juvenile court assignment when determining custody or making restraining orders.

Learning Objectives—Participants will be able to:

1. Define evidence-based risk factors and assessments.
2. Identify stakeholders assessing risk.
3. Explore strategies to safely and ethically collaborate to share information regarding risk.
4. Apply the principles of risk assessment to the experience and needs of domestic violence litigants in custody, parenting time and restraining order cases.

CONVENING OF STATE, COUNTY, AND COURT LEADERS: A VISION FOR MENTAL HEALTH REFORM (INVITATION ONLY)

◆ MCLE * BBS CRC 5.210

California's courts and their justice partners have a once in a generation opportunity to help fix California's systemic challenges. Driven by the Family First Prevention Services Act, the Continuum of Care Reform, and Implementation of Assembly Bill (AB) 2083, significant design and implementation work is in progress to provide children in the child welfare and juvenile justice system the support they need. In the 2018 California Children's Report Card, issued by Children Now, it found 25% of children in California are at risk for developmental, behavioral or social delays. The National Alliance on Mental Illness found that across the country, 70% of youth involved in the juvenile justice system have a diagnosable mental illness. The California Health Care Foundation reports that only 33% of children in foster care receive any specialty mental health services, and statewide only 50% of children receive such a service. County teams will be given their own county data regarding mental health and other key outcomes specific to their county. This state and county convening will discuss options for how to use mental health and related resources as they are now, and any options to ensure that more children and youth have access to timely mental health, effective special education, and preventive and early child abuse and neglect interventions.

Learning Objectives—Participants will be able to:

1. Describe the basics of how mental health services are funded for children in foster care.
2. Discuss the data dashboards provided for their county.
3. Choose successful strategies to implement change in their counties

JUVENILE DEPENDENCY LAW AND PROCESS

◆ MCLE ✕ CIMCE CRC 5.242, 5.518

This course provides an overview of the dependency legal system. The course focuses on stakeholder roles, dependency law and process, and legally mandated timelines. This course meets 4 of the 8-hour requirement for attorneys seeking to accept court-appointed cases per California Rules of Court, rule 5.660(d), and qualifies for 4 total hours of MCLE credit. This course provides 4 hours of MCLE credit at the conference. It is intended to be taken with other qualifying dependency workshops to meet the 8-hour requirement for new attorneys.

Learning Objectives—Participants will be able to:

1. Distinguish the legal requirements and standards of proof in dependency law and procedure throughout the dependency process.
2. Identify and summarize the roles in the dependency legal system.
3. Articulate knowledge of the timelines and legal mandates in a dependency case.
4. Integrate available resources to assist them into their daily child welfare practice.

◆ MCLE * BBS ◆ STC ✕ CIMCE CRC 5.215, 5.230, 5.242, 5.518, 5.664, 10.478(b)

There has been research on trauma, its consequences and treatment approaches. However, little attention in research has been paid to applying what we know about the relationship between racism, trauma from current life events, historical trauma and its connection with epigenetics and family violence. Recent events in Charleston, Charlottesville and Lexington, ICE family separations, treatment of Native Americans, women of color, victims of domestic violence and sex trafficking, highlight a high level of racial animus, disinterest or cognitive dissonance in the United States. Research on trauma in Holocaust survivors, has found that the experience of the Holocaust made changes to their genes, passed to the next generation manifesting into stress in their children. Progressive approaches as in Dr. Joy DeGruy's book and workbook, Post-Traumatic Slave Syndrome, helps professionals and non-professionals identify how the enslavement of Africans effects African Americans today. Science has even noted that through epigenetic(s) research, environment or exposure to trauma changes genes. Events described above along with racism historically and in present times represent unacknowledged or unaddressed, experienced vicariously can be traumatizing.

This half-day session will examine historical and contemporary racial trauma, its roots, epigenetics, healing, and what professionals need to know and do.

Part I

Overview of trauma and trauma informed care through the lens of contemporary and historical trauma and racism.

Part II

The relationship between epigenetics, trauma and environmental factors.

Part III

The connection between historical, contemporary and racialized trauma within generational family violence and provide strategies for addressing and healing.

Learning Objectives—Participants will be able to:

1. Review trauma and trauma informed care.
2. Describe the relationship between contemporary and historical trauma and racism.
3. Discuss the research on epigenetics and the long-term consequences of racism on the health and well-being/wellness.
4. Identify strategies, tools and resources for justice system partners and systems to address historical trauma and racism.

INCARCERATED PARENT: *TRE MAISON DASAN

◆ MCLE * BBS ◆ STC ✕ CIMCE CRC 5.210, 5.225, 5.242, 10.478(b)

According to the National Resource Center on Children & Families of the Incarcerated at Rutgers, more than 2.7 million children in the U.S. have an incarcerated parent, with approximately 10 million children having experienced parental incarceration at some point in their lives.

Women are the fastest growing population in prisons and jail, the explanation for which are varied but the collateral consequences are demonstrable. Children of incarcerated women are more likely to enter the juvenile justice system, end up homeless, in foster care and experience mental health/behavioral health problems. What to do about the unnecessary removal of their children and potential dissolution of their families while maintaining public safety and addressing criminality?

This session, a panel and showing of the documentary, Tre Maison Dasan, will discuss the consequences and cost of separation on health and well-being of children with incarcerated parents and efforts to keep criminal justice involved parents connected with and not separated from their children, and resources available to parents. The panel will include Denali Tiller, the director/producer of Tre Maison Dasan, and a youth featured in the film.

Learning Objectives—Participants will be able to:

1. Identify the collateral impact on children with an incarcerated parent.
2. Discuss alternatives to sentencing parents of children high risk for entering the juvenile dependency or delinquency system.
3. Review effective programs of keeping criminal justice involved parents and their children connected.

NEWCOMER IMMIGRANT YOUTH IN JUVENILE JUSTICE PROCEEDINGS: A TRAUMA-INFORMED APPROACH

◆ MCLE ◆ STC ✕ CIMCE CRC 5.664

In consultation with the National Council of Juvenile and Family Court Judges, the Center for Trauma & Juvenile Justice, the National Center for Youth Law, and the Refugee Trauma & Resilience Center have created a primer outlining a trauma-informed approach to judicial decision-making for newcomer immigrant youth in juvenile justice proceedings.

“Newcomer immigrant youth” – refugees, asylum seekers, and unaccompanied children – face unique challenges when involved with the juvenile justice system. This session will assist judges in recognizing the behavioral, social, and learning challenges that many newcomer immigrant youth experience as a result of trauma, as well as in identifying services and judicial orders that can best support these youth in successfully resolving the legal, educational, and psychosocial issues that have brought them before the juvenile court. Highlighted issues will include case studies, the types of trauma newcomer youth experience, cultural considerations, and the impact of a delinquency adjudication on immigration status.

Learning Objectives—Participants will be able to:

1. Recognize the unique trauma that impacts newcomer immigrant youth, understand how this trauma exposure may lead to involvement in the juvenile justice system, and identify advocacy strategies to help youth recover from trauma by recognizing and building resilience.
2. Articulate the cultural considerations that courts should be aware of when adjudicating a case involving newcomer immigrant youth.
3. Understand how a delinquency adjudication may affect youths’ immigration status.
4. Identify what courts and judges can do to make trauma-informed decisions in cases with newcomer immigrant youth.

BRINGING TOGETHER JUVENILE COURT STAKEHOLDERS TO ATTAIN PERMANENCY FOR YOUTH WITH COMPLEX NEEDS

◆ MCLE * BBS ◆ STC ✕ CIMCE CRC 5.242, 5.518, 5.664

Our youth have experienced difficult times in their lives...abuse, neglect, trauma, poor decision-making. Our collective task is to assist them on their journey to a strong, supportive family that will help the youth heal and set them on the path to a successful adulthood. When we work as a team, challenge each other, be creative and take thoughtful risks, all youth can enjoy life with a family...but it takes ALL of us!

Learning Objectives—Participants will be able to:

1. Embrace the critical need for a lifelong family regardless of their age or situation.
2. Become aware of the various strategies that the court can employ to expedite permanency.
3. Become familiar with the various roadblocks to permanency for youth.

ETHICS FOR JUVENILE COURT JUDGES (JUDGES ONLY)

◆ MCLE [2 hours Ethics] ◆ STC

This workshop for judges only will address the unique ethical issues faced by juvenile court judges. Intended to be an open exchange of questions, comments and views amongst the panelists and participants, this workshop will consider issues inside and outside of the courtroom, including the pitfalls of the collaborative working environment encouraged in juvenile courts, ex parte communications and access to multiple sources of information, and developing resources for at-risk children and community out-reach under Standards of Judicial Administration 5.40. Bring your real life hypotheticals, questions and opinions for a lively discussion.

Learning Objectives—Participants will be able to:

1. Recognize how to respond to situations in the community.
2. Describe how to work with your local CASA program.
3. Discuss how to use the court's case management system.

THE POVERTY ROLEPLAYING WORKSHOP

◆ MCLE/Bias * BBS ◆ STC ✕ CIMCE CRC 5.210, 5.225, 5.242, 5.518

This interactive course will teach participants how challenges faced by litigants living in poverty might affect their ability to make timely court appearances, comply with court orders, or work with social services, legal services, or law enforcement. Participants will also learn whether elements of the family services systems might unwittingly lead to delays, repeat hearings or other situations that frustrate the court and parties alike. Participants will be randomly assigned to play the roles of family members living in poverty. Outside volunteers will role-play members of the court system and other governmental agencies, private business owners, and non-profits. At the end of the simulations, we will have a robust discussion about systemic changes we might consider implementing to respond fairly to the challenges faced by the populations we serve or work with, and how to improve our systems in the process.

Learning Objectives—Participants will be able to:

TRAUMA-INFORMED ADJUDICATION OF YOUTH (OPEN TO YOUTH)

Youth who live in a challenging family environment and who must navigate through tough, often dangerous, neighborhoods develop a heightened sense of survival reflexes. For these youth, knowing when to flee, fight, or disappear are important skills for staying safe. When these young people bring these survival skills to school, they are often labeled defiant or non-compliant. When these youth are confronted by authorities, they can be perceived as delinquent. It is important that schools officials and legal authorities understand how trauma impacts the behavior of these youth. Institutions that educate or adjudicate youth need to know the trauma history of the youth to best address their needs.

The science of youth development has proven that it is far more effective to build on the youth's strengths, rather than focusing on their weaknesses. One of the challenges for traumatized youth is self-identifying their strengths. Youth who are constantly labeled as defiant, non-compliant, or delinquent do not perceive themselves as having strengths. Youth need to understand that all humans have strengths, regardless of their trauma.

Learning Objectives—Participants will be able to:

1. Understand the importance of knowing youth's trauma history.
2. Identify and reflect back youth strengths.
3. Understand how trauma impacts youth and their behavior.

Adverse Childhood Experiences and Toxic Stress: Improving Outcomes for Children

Dr. Burke Harris will speak about adverse childhood experiences affects physical and behavioral outcomes for children. The Adverse Childhood Experiences Study (ACEs) was a study conducted by the Center for Disease Control and Kaiser Permanente. This study asked over 17,000 people about their experiences in childhood with physical, emotional or sexual abuse or neglect and/or if in their childhood they were raised by a parent who was mentally ill, incarcerated, had issues with substance abuse, the parents were separated, or had experienced domestic violence. The study found that the higher the ACE score, the worse your health outcomes. Adverse childhood experiences affect our biological stress response.

Learning Objectives—Participants will be able to:

1. Describe the ACEs study.
2. Explain how adverse childhood experiences affect a child’s development.
3. Identify one model of how to address ACEs in the primary care home.

◆ MCLE * BBS ✕ CIMCE CRC 5.210, 5.225, 5.242, 5.518, 10.478(b), 10.478(c)–(d)

Prevention services are a critical component of keeping families together and helping children thrive. As we strive to move toward a child welfare system that prioritizes prevention, it is important to be mindful about the unintended consequences different prevention strategies can have on children and families, particularly in those instances when a child needs to be moved out of their home for their own protection and safety. This session will discuss the impacts of the increasingly widespread practice of child welfare intervention to divert children at risk of entering foster care from juvenile court by encouraging relatives to petition for probate guardianship of these children.

Joining Forces for a Better Future for Children and Families

We will explore the different ways that children come to live with a relative or extended family member (i.e. probate guardianships, voluntary placement agreements, voluntary family services, and other informal care arrangements) and how the use of kinship care to prevent opening a foster care case can have unintended and negative consequences on the very children and families that our system seeks to support. Specifically, presenters will share data about the demographics of kinship caregivers and children who are placed in informal kinship care versus a formal foster care placement with a relative. We will contrast the different services and supports available to children placed in foster care with those placed with relatives outside of foster care. We will explore the impacts of various prevention practices on child safety, access to funding and services, due process protections for parents and children, legal permanency, and health care and educational decision-making authority. Finally, presenters will share best practices and recommendations to ensure children in kinship families have access to the supports, services and benefits they need to thrive.

Learning Objectives—Participants will be able to:

1. Discuss a variety of prevention strategies, and identify the different objectives of primary prevention versus secondary prevention (i.e. prevention of foster care).
2. Recite basic eligibility rules for the various programs available to support children in and out of foster care including foster care benefits, subsidized guardianship assistance, adoption assistance, and TANF.
3. Identify model policies, laws, and court orders that can be implemented in a participant's home state/county in order to improve a child/family's ability to access necessary supports, benefits and services.
4. Demonstrate how different prevention programs may threaten or weaken a child or parent's due process rights, impact child safety, undermine the ability of the child and parent to achieve reunification, and impact health care and educational decision-making.

◆ MCLE/Bias * BBS ✕ CIMCE CRC 5.210, 5.225, 5.242, 5.518, 5.660(d)

A highly interactive workshop facilitated by experts in representation of fathers in legal proceedings, involvement of fathers in services, and training of child welfare and juvenile justice professionals, who bring personal connections along with expertise in ensuring fathers and their relatives are valued and meaningfully engaged. Presented through three distinct views including the father, the child and the advocate, this workshop focuses on mitigating loss trauma for children and youth. Participants can expect an update of legal requirements to identify and involve fathers and their relatives, followed by an exploration and discussion through the eyes of the child regarding how Dad can provide safety and protection from the outside world, and a sense of enduring engagement by remaining emotionally available and repairing ruptures in the father-child relationship. Resources provided include updated research surrounding the obstacles and challenges fathers and practitioners face in these proceedings, such as a focused discussion about individual biases, and how addressing those biases can support the practitioner in effectively advocating for fathers' inclusion. Also included is a discussion of why some fathers appear reluctant to participate, or even defiant in their behavior toward professionals, as well as a resource tool to help guide the practitioner to uncover strengths and true commitments from fathers.

Learning Objectives—Participants will be able to:

1. Describe the importance of involving fathers and how personal biases can impact the ability to effectively engage fathers in child welfare and delinquency matters.
2. Discuss how Dad can draw on key reflective insights and effective strategies to support his child through traumatic loss while building resilience.
3. Explain how the power of father's words can create and maintain a regulating and healing environment for his child(ren) and himself.
4. Identify ways to approach and engage fathers to build a more trusting, working relationship that benefits both father and his child(ren).

Cutting-edge neuroscience research shows that chronic stress and trauma alter youth brain development and impact their behavior - reducing their capacity for emotion regulation and empathy, affecting everything they do. Juvenile Justice formal agents (courts, corrections, police, probation) as well as education, mental health and child welfare professionals, caregivers and more, who are involved in serving these youth, imbibe secondary/vicarious trauma, which affects optimal professional performance as well as personal sustainability. This workshop will present the latest scientific findings on the impact of toxic stress and trauma on brain development and behavior, and discuss optimal solutions for mitigating these impacts, validated by neuroscience, trauma research and somatic psychology.

This dynamic and interactive workshop will combine short didactic sections with small-group breakouts and large-group experiential practice. The workshop will integrate cognitive, emotional and kinesthetic learning. Participants will leave with an experiential taste of Dynamic Mindfulness (DMind), so they can feel its impact for themselves - an experience that they can immediately apply in their lives and work, personally and professionally. The collective wisdom and experience of participants will be captured from small-group discussions and shared with the larger group. In the spirit of ‘It Takes A Village’ – this workshop will provide the theory and powerful practices that anyone can do anywhere, to mitigate the effects of chronic/toxic stress and primary/secondary trauma. We will explore approaches to balance our efforts on our external environments (systems/organizations) with transformative efforts on our internal environments (information processing, emotion regulation). ◆ MCLE ✕ CIMCE CRC 5.242

The Los Angeles County, Department of Children and Family Services (DCFS), and the Los Angeles Office of County Counsel, has the only dedicated Child Abduction Hague Unit in the State of California. This is a group of social workers and County Counsel attorneys that are trained in all aspects of the Hague Convention on the Civil Aspects of International Child Abduction. When a Hague hearing is set in the foreign country a member of the DCFS Hague Unit travels to that country to participate in the hearing and argue for the return of the child. Participants will learn how to complete an application under the Hague Convention on the Civil Aspects of International Child Abduction, with special emphasis on applications submitted to Mexico. Participants will also learn alternative options for when a Hague application is not feasible. Examples include welfare and whereabouts visits, petitions for access, and working with foreign nationals. Case examples will be provided of an actual Hague hearing that occurred including photos, case descriptions, and outcomes.

Learning Objectives—Participants will be able to:

1. Create a model for handling an international child abduction.
2. Recognize different types of child abduction cases and how to respond to each.
3. Devise strategies for dealing with foreign governments.
4. Demonstrate an understanding of the different methods to locate and recover a child removed from the United States.

School shootings are occurring at an alarming rate around the country, but nowhere is the gun violence crisis more evident than in our under-served urban communities where homicide rates often reach 10 times the national average. Young Black men are especially vulnerable - the chance of a Black American family losing a son to a bullet is 62% greater than losing him to a car accident. Additionally, domestic violence and suicide prevention and intervention are enhanced by addressing access to, and prohibitions against, firearms. While some of these issues have too often been left out of the national conversation about guns, the good news is that change is possible and is happening in cities across the U.S., including here in California. As the leader in providing comprehensive victim-centered and trauma-informed trainings nationwide, RAINN’s expert trainer will walk through how to better support children, families, and victims affected by sexual violence, as they move through the court system. We will begin by providing the group with a comprehensive overview of sexual violence and how the judicial system affects survivors. This will include an overview of the prevalence and scope of sexual violence within the United States, an overview of how trauma affects an individual’s actions and reactions – including their behavior, memory, and emotional responses, and common traumatic responses that can look like lying or deception throughout the judicial process. Then we’ll dive into how participants can apply in their professional roles this understanding of trauma and its lasting impact on victims and witnesses to effectively communicate with and support survivors in a manner that resists re-traumatization, helps obtain necessary information, and can lead to more just outcomes in the court system.

Learning Objectives—Participants will be able to:

1. Identify common responses to trauma of victims of sexual violence.
2. Explain the importance of being trauma-informed and victim-centered.
3. Recognize and set aside common biases that lead to re-traumatization of victims in the response process.
4. Apply victim-centered, trauma-informed communication strategies to interactions with victims including formal and informal interviewing.

This workshop will encourage participants to reflect on how they identify and manage their own implicit biases and the impact of implicit bias at decision points within various systems, e.g. child welfare, juvenile justice, mental health and education. The presentation will explore how implicit biases can affect outcomes such as how youth are brought into the juvenile justice and child welfare systems. Participants will develop a keener understanding of the extent to which implicit bias can contribute to the differential handling of children based on race/ethnicity, social class and gender.

Learning Objectives—Participants will be able to:

1. Identify racial impact strategies as it relates to child welfare.
2. Recognize how racial impact strategies can be utilized to reduce and eliminate implicit bias and its impact on individual and institutional decision-making.
3. Develop conscious awareness of how each individual holds implicit bias and how that impacts decision-making and outcomes for system involved youth.

Chronic absence, missing 10% or more of school, is a known early warning sign that students are off track for academic success. When chronic absence reaches high levels, it is a sign that schools, community partners, and public agencies need to work together to develop a comprehensive, prevention oriented approach to improving attendance while also unpacking and addressing barriers that keep students and families from getting to class. Offered by Hedy Chang of Attendance Works, this session will especially focus on lessons learned for reducing the high chronic absence rates and working with community stakeholders to create positive learning environments that encourage and support regular attendance.

Learning Objectives—Participants will be able to:

Many Northern Rural California Counties are disproportionately affected by high Adverse Child Experience (ACE) scores relative to other regions in California. The Population Health Innovation Lab (PHIL), a program of the Public Health Institute, is supporting the formation of a Northern California collaborative focused on identifying and addressing opportunities for policy and systems change that mitigate issues of trauma and domestic violence.

Learning Objectives—Participants will be able to:

1. Describe how five Northern Rural California counties are addressing ACEs and domestic violence as part of the ACE spectrum in an innovative and informative way.
2. Identify the current issues and needs in Northern Rural California as it relates to ACEs and domestic violence.
3. Apply the frameworks to create systemic change that can be utilized in your organization and/or community.
4. Identify additional tools and frameworks that are critical to create system change.

the assessment and approval process imposed by Continuum of Care Reform (CCR), coupled with several recent appellate court opinions, California is still striving for effective and consistent implementation of the relative placement preference across the state. This training will address tools and tips for what can be done to speed up the Resource Family Approval (RFA) process and steps to take to ensure your clients' relatives do not fall through the cracks. Additionally, a step-by-step overview of relevant statutory language, case law and state policy on relative placement requirements, as they apply to each hearing in a dependency court proceeding will also be provided. This will include information about recent changes to the criminal history assessment process for prospective caregivers, as well as an overview of changes in funding and financial supports available for children being cared for by relatives. We will also discuss obtaining a more complete picture of why the RFA assessment was approved or denied, how the RFA assessment process intersects with juvenile dependency proceedings, and what remedies may be available when the RFA assessment process has been delayed or denied.

Learning Objectives—Participants will be able to:

1. Describe the RFA process including the requirements placed on the county placement agencies and the juvenile courts during each stage of the proceeding.
2. Explain the differences between relative and resource family placement approval including comprehending the elusive criminal background assessment and exemption requirements, and recent changes in the law regarding the financial benefits available.
3. Create a strategy to push RFA relative assessments to completion in a reasonable time frame.
4. Prepare to argue for or against the release of RFA assessment information to parties and attorneys in juvenile court.

Talking about race is hard. Racial disparities create risk for long-lasting harms to children. Many professionals voice frustration with introductory level 'cultural competency' trainings that do not provide concrete tools needed to take action to change racial disparities. The conceptual model (Lewis, 2011) uses a trauma-informed, ecological systems framework to focus on the quality of working relationships within organizational systems. Research findings are presented from work with early childhood educators and work with interdisciplinary child welfare teams composed of juvenile court judges, lawyers and social workers using the National Zero to Three Safe Baby Court Teams (SBCT) innovative approach. Participants will be introduced to several tools including the Perception of the Quality of Working Relationships (Lewis, 2009) and successful strategies used by SBCT teams to collect data and set sustainable goals to reduce racial disparities. ◆ MCLE/Bias * BBS ✕ CIMCE CRC 5.518, 10.478(b), 10.478(c)–(d)

Jurisdiction is exercised jointly when a tribal court judge and a state or federal court judge come together to exercise their respective authority simultaneously, bringing together justice system partners and leveraging resources to promote healing and protect public safety. This cutting edge approach to justice is a blend of tribal healing to wellness and collaborative courts and has been used across several case types. Judge Abby Abinanti, Chief Judge of the Yurok Tribal Court, and Judge Joyce Hinrichs, Presiding Judge of the Humboldt Superior Court, have designed a joint jurisdiction Family Wellness Court as a voluntary alternative to juvenile dependency court. Jenny Walter has served as the consultant to the Humboldt Superior Court and to the Northern California Tribal Courts Coalition to establish these courts, and together they will explain the process for creating the joint jurisdiction court, share lessons learned and give participants an understanding of what is necessary to establish a joint jurisdiction court in their own jurisdictions.

Learning Objectives—Participants will be able to:

1. Explain the value of effective tribal-state collaboration in effectively serving Indian children and families.
2. Identify some of the legal and practical issues that may arise in developing a joint jurisdiction court and strategies to address these issues.
3. Describe active efforts under the Indian Child Welfare Act be made across the continuum of service provision in a manner that takes into account the prevailing social and cultural values, conditions, and way of life of the Indian child’s tribe.

Between 1973, when the Fetal Alcohol Syndrome (FAS) was first described in the United States, and the present, this disorder has evolved from a purely medical condition to what some people would suggest is a social epidemic. We will consider some of the reasons for this evolution and discuss the major impact that social workers, probation officers, mental health professionals, and legal professionals can have on the future of children and their families who are at risk of, or are already affected by, this condition.

Learning Objectives—Participants will be able to:

1. Identify specific drugs of abuse and the harm when ingested during pregnancy.
2. Differentiate between Fetal Alcohol Syndrome (FAS), Partial Fetal Alcohol Syndrome (pFAS) and Alcohol Related Neurodevelopmental Disorder (ARND), realizing that all three of these diagnoses fall within the spectrum of Fetal Alcohol Spectrum Disorders (FASD).
3. Recognize the prevalence of FASD in comparison with ASD in school-aged children.

The speaker will present her work on the data gathering and information about the Missing and Murdered Indigenous Women database, held by Sovereign Bodies Institute (SBI). She will provide an in-depth review of SBI's work tracing, investigating, documenting and mapping cases of missing and murdered indigenous women and girls describing the connection with domestic violence, sexual assault and sex trafficking. She will highlight issues related to the collection of information by local, state and federal law enforcement and how indigenous identities are often missing or misidentified. The speaker will describe the process of relationship building with local, state and federal law enforcement agencies, how she maintains the confidentiality and integrity of SBI's database, and its policies regarding sharing of information. Attendees will have opportunities for small group and large group discussions in this workshop to further identify issues and create solutions for their own communities.

Learning Objectives—Participants will be able to:

1. Describe the disproportional rates of missing and murdered indigenous women and girls in relation to domestic violence, sexual assault and sex trafficking.
2. Identify the process of mapping, investigating, documenting and sovereign data gathering.
3. Describe issues in collecting information and communication by local, state and federal law enforcement.

2J. Notice Across the Border Through the Letters Rogatory Process: Cross-Border Collaboration

◆ MCLE ✕ CIMCE CRC 5.242, 10.478(b), 10.478(c)–(d)

Nearly one in four children in the United States live with immigrant parents, and over 18.6 million children have at least one foreign born parent. In addition, “between 2009 and 2013, almost four million non-citizens were deported and an estimated half-million of those deportees were parents of US citizen children” (NCJFCJ, 2018). How do social service agencies and juvenile courts handle cases where parents are deported or live in foreign countries? How do border communities meet the challenge of working with binational cases. How should attorneys work with parents that are on the other side of the border, that they may never meet in person? In this interactive workshop, meet the team of four professionals from the border community of Imperial County, California that handles binational cases every day. Judge Juan Ulloa, DSS Program Manager Brenda Vera, and Attorney Veronica Henderson will use real-world scenarios to show participants how to notice using the Inter-American Convention on Letters Rogatory, work with DIF, conduct UCCJEA calls with foreign countries and more.

Learning Objectives—Participants will be able to:

1. Formulate how to utilize the letters rogatory process to notice foreign parents in juvenile dependency cases.
2. Critique binational cases for procedural and substantive pitfalls in the juvenile dependency process, including notice violations.
3. Role play different courtroom arguments which can occur when parents are in foreign countries and how to avoid multiple continuances.

This workshop discusses the cross-over between proceedings under the Lanterman-Petris-Short Act (LPS) and juvenile court proceedings (dependency and juvenile justice). Presenters will explain the time frames and criteria for periods of involuntary hospitalizations under the LPS Act, and the subsequent referral for conservatorship. The issue of coordination or lack thereof with the juvenile court will be addressed. Other topics include the role of the Public Guardian, placement options, psychotropic medication, the definition of “grave disability,” access to juvenile court records, alternatives to conservatorship, courtroom environment for youth with mental illness, selection of a conservator, and disparities among different counties in their approach to conservatorship for youth. Participants will have the opportunity to hear the perspective of the court, county counsel representing the Public Guardian, the public defender representing the youth, and a treating psychiatrist from Starview Adolescent Center.

Learning Objectives—Participants will be able to:

1. Describe the purpose, timing, and procedural requirements of a Riese hearing.
2. Discuss how to advocate for a client who may be subject to multiple court proceedings in which their mental health is at issue.
3. Recognize the limits of legally permitted mental health information-sharing between separate court divisions and among professionals treating and advocating for the client.

Good planning and service delivery requires good information. The ability to access relevant educational, medical and other histories in a timely way is critical to good outcomes for youth under court jurisdiction. Yet, good outcomes also require recognizing and honoring the importance of privacy and discretion, particularly related to sensitive information in a child's record. This workshop will begin with an overview of the confidentiality laws that control release of information about foster youth from child welfare, health, mental health, education and probation files, and introduce new resources summarizing and providing guidance on these laws. Then, a panel of professionals representing different perspectives will take on some of the common and most challenging information sharing scenarios, including sharing in multi-disciplinary teams and CFTs, and disclosing sensitive information such as mental health and reproductive health information. The panel will apply their knowledge and give feedback on the challenges from their perspectives. Audience members will be encouraged to participate and provide their solutions, scenarios and perspectives as well.

Learning Objectives—Participants will be able to:

1. Describe the confidentiality laws that impact access to child welfare, probation, health and education information about youth under court jurisdiction.
2. Describe the tools and exceptions that allow for, and limit access to confidential information.
3. Identify resources to stay up-to-date with the ever changing regulations and best practices regarding confidentiality for youth in care.

Recent outcome data has demonstrated that foster youth in California’s schools continue to experience a significant achievement gap compared to their peers and often fail to graduate. This workshop will highlight a multi-agency approach to improve foster youth educational outcomes facilitated through the Foster Focus data system. Foster Focus is used to monitor academic progress, manage transitions and promote collaboration between placement and education agencies. Sacramento, San Bernardino and San Luis Obispo counties will discuss local best practices and partnerships facilitated through Foster Focus to support the unique education needs of foster youth. The Sacramento County Office of Education is the administrator agency for the Foster Focus data system, currently used by 45 counties across California. Foster Focus integrates data from the Child Welfare Services/Case Management System (CWS/CMS), School Information Systems (SIS), and the California Longitudinal Pupil Achievement Data System (CALPADS), and can be used by child welfare, probation, school districts, and County Offices of Education (COEs).

Learning Objectives—Participants will be able to:

1. Review current academic outcome data and common education barriers experienced by foster youth in California.
2. Identify innovative local practices facilitated through the Foster Focus data system.

There are currently no evidence based best practices specific to serving children and youth who have been commercially sexually exploited (CSE). However, the harm reduction approach has been recognized as a promising practice to engage and meet the unique needs of this population. The approach empowers youth to be the curators of their own safety, including how they define safety. It involves promoting self-determination and assisting youth in gaining, or re-establishing, their own sense of power. It acknowledges that CSE youth will likely continue to engage in risk-taking behaviors, such as running away, using substances or having unprotected sex, even while accessing services, and that supporting youth in taking small, incremental steps toward safer behavior will eventually lead to longer term safety and stability.

In this workshop, participants will learn a brief historical context of the harm reduction approach and evidence of its impact when used to support individuals with substance use disorders, as well as adults in the sex trade. Further, the presenters will demonstrate how the approach is applied to CSE youth, its limitations and barriers, and how utilizing such an approach is beneficial and impactful. The presentation will specifically focus on the adoption of a harm reduction approach both in practice and philosophy; highlighting the ways it can be implemented both systemically and in direct service across a range of disciplines.

Learning Objectives—Participants will be able to:

1. Participants will understand the principles of a harm reduction approach.
2. Participants will understand the application of a harm reduction approach to commercially sexually exploited children and youth.
3. Participants will be able to articulate specific harm reduction strategies to implement in practice when serving commercially exploited youth.
4. Participants will learn how harm reduction strategies can be used with youth across a range of disciplines.

3F. How Can Technology and Data Reduce Conflict & Increase Civility?

* BBS © PSY ✕ CIMCE CRC 5.210, 5.225, 5.518

The American family justice system has been in crisis for decades. Under-resourced, over utilized family courts remain the preferred venue for resolving familial disputes despite evidence showing this regularly results in increased parental acrimony and has negative implications for the children. As Millennials (who represent 90% of new parents) enter their age of conscious uncoupling, they're bringing more and more complex cases to courts. Intelligent Dispute Resolution is an emerging technology field that utilizes computer and human intelligence to help parents predict and prevent conflict. When conflict occurs, they can be connected to an on-demand mediator who can help resolve disputes, draft agreements and coach parents towards a more civil co-parenting relationship. In this session, attendees will receive a comprehensive introduction to Intelligent Dispute Resolution technologies and gain foundational understanding about how these technologies can be used to minimize conflict and enhance civility in different complex relationship settings.

Learning Objectives—Participants will be able to:

1. Explain the available Intelligent Dispute Resolution technologies.
2. Describe how IDR technologies can be used to minimize conflict and enhance civility in different complex relationship settings.
3. Apply these technologies in a family justice setting.

Globally, nearly 1 in 3 women over the age of 15 have experienced intimate partner violence (IPV), and several reports have shown that women subjected to IPV experience repetitive mild traumatic brain injuries (TBIs) at alarmingly high rates. Women have also reported high rates of symptoms (cognitive difficulties, depression, anxiety, sleep problems) that are consistent with outcomes following TBIs in other populations. However, for women survivors of IPV, many of these symptoms have been overlooked or interpreted as being associated with partner violence itself, rather than TBIs. In this course, data will be presented on the effects of IPV-related TBI on women's cognitive and psychological health as well as structural and functional neural connectivity. This course will also address recognizing and understanding strangulation in women, as the consequences of strangulation are often unrecognized and, may interact with or exacerbate effects of TBIs.

Learning Objectives—Participants will be able to:

1. Describe the high rate of TBIs in women who have experienced IPV.
2. Describe the health consequences of TBI and strangulation.
3. Describe current research on the neural consequences of IPV.

◆ MCLE * BBS ◎ PSY ◆ STC ✕ CIMCE CRC 5.242, 5.518, 5.660(d), 5.664

The issue of how to handle juvenile justice youth who are declared incompetent to stand trial has long frustrated the delinquency system. Recent legislation established clear timelines and processes to balance public safety with the treatment needs of the youth. In this workshop, participants will learn about new legal requirements regarding juvenile competency including who may raise a doubt about the youth's ability to understand the proceedings, the requirements of experts appointed to evaluate the youth, court reviews of remediation services, limitations on and alternatives to secure confinement, and required county protocols.

Learning Objectives—Participants will be able to:

1. Articulate the current legal standard and court process for competency in a juvenile case.
2. Describe the court's role when the court finds that the minor is incompetent.
3. Identify the timelines for delivery of restoration and remediation services.
4. Identify the maximum times of secure confinement.

◆ MCLE/Ethics ✕ CIMCE CRC 5.518, 5.660(d)

Parents with lived experience who have successfully navigated the child welfare system can be powerful allies to parents, and the attorneys who represent them in juvenile dependency cases. This workshop will highlight lessons learned from two innovative programs in legal offices primarily representing parents: Dependency Advocacy Center's (DAC) 10 year-old Mentor Parent program and the brand new Parent Advocate program it inspired at East Bay Family Defenders (EBFD). We will comprehensively walk participants through the steps and considerations necessary to build a strong and successful Mentor Parent/Parent Advocate program.

Learning Objectives—Participants will be able to:

1. Assess implementation considerations, such as: the qualifications, roles and responsibilities of mentor parents; sustaining funding for the program; and supervision models.
2. Evaluate data and outcomes, as well as emerging research demonstrating improved child welfare outcomes associated with Mentor Parent programs.
3. Describe leadership development for mentor parents, including an examination of the strengths and challenges of incorporating a mentor parent into management and how to meaningfully incorporate the voices of parents to impact the larger child welfare system.

◆ MCLE/Bias * BBS ✕ CIMCE CRC 5.210, 5.225, 5.242, 5.518, 5.660(d)

In public, private, and nonprofit organizations, we are called upon to serve our children and families in ways that grow and change with their needs. However, despite our best efforts, we often perpetuate services and outcomes that are inequitable and deepen disparities for children and families of color. The Interstate Agency Workgroup to Eliminate Disparities will highlight current disparities for children and families in California; introduce solution-based tools from the workgroup's Racial Equity Curriculum with potential for transformation; and deliver hands-on guidance in the development of a customized Racial Impact Tool. Racial Impact Tools systematically analyze how racial and ethnic groups are affected by an existing or proposed action or policy and are now widely regarded as critical in the assessment of possible unintended impacts for undeserved communities. When applied and utilized properly, a Racial Impact Tool can help reveal how communities are situated differently, revealing inequities that require targeted strategies that would have otherwise been missed.

Learning Objectives—Participants will be able to:

1. Describe the work of the Interstate Agency Workgroup to Eliminate Disparities.
2. Apply the Racial Impact Tool and Equity Curriculum to identify bias in policymaking at decision points.
3. Identify how to reduce bias and disparate outcomes for children and families of color.

3K. Special Immigrant Juvenile Status: Safeguarding the Futures of Undocumented Youth in Foster Care

◆ MCLE ✕ CIMCE CRC 5.242, 5.664, 10.478(b)

California's child welfare and juvenile justice systems undoubtedly include a significant population of undocumented children. The vast majority of these youth qualify for immigration relief, including Special Immigrant Juvenile Status (SIJS). Undocumented children who leave foster care without obtaining SIJS or other forms of immigration relief face additional hurdles in finding work and transitioning to successful adulthood. Unfortunately, obtaining legal status has become increasingly difficult in today's political climate, and children seeking immigration relief often face significant pushback from U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS).

The panel will discuss how a pathway to citizenship can change the lives of undocumented children and how anti-immigrant bias at the state and federal level affects undocumented children. This session will discuss recent changes to the immigration landscape that undocumented children must navigate. We will review new USCIS policies, the challenges that they create for undocumented children, and best practice recommendations to overcome these challenges. Using the information learned, participants will consider sample fact patterns and discuss how to best address potential hurdles to a child's SIJS eligibility.

Learning Objectives—Participants will be able to:

1. Recognize the requirements for presenting a successful petition for Special Immigrant Juvenile Status to USCIS.
2. Explain the new challenges presented by USCIS to youth seeking SIJS in California.
3. Identify how stakeholders can better support undocumented foster youth in their efforts to obtain immigration status.

◆ MCLE * BBS ✕ CIMCE CRC 5.210, 5.225, 5.242, 5.518, 5.660(d)

Birth and resource parent partnerships help ensure excellent parenting for children in the child welfare system. These partnerships can facilitate vital information sharing about the children's needs, provide organic supports for families during visits and case transitions, help maintain youth connections with supportive adults, increase placement stability, reduce trauma from grief and loss, and support positive, long-term outcomes. In this workshop, participants will discuss how child welfare system stakeholders including judges, court personnel, social workers, agency administrators, attorneys, caregivers, CASAs, and others can cultivate a system culture in which birth and resource families work together to improve the lives of children by strengthening relationships, communication, and involvement in decision and policy-making. The workshop will include examples of successful agency practices and specific strategies stakeholders can use to support birth and resource parent partnerships. Workshop faculty will lead the group through a discussion of successful practices, as well as teach participants how to implement those in their own work. Participants will also engage in a discussion regarding the barriers to birth and resource parent partnerships and ways to overcome those barriers. Video of birth and resource parents discussing successful co-parenting will also be shared.

Learning Objectives—Participants will be able to:

What is the future of juvenile justice in California? The signing of the 2019-2020 California budget by Governor Newsom brings about major change and uncertainty to the future of the current systems in place. What is the primary focus of the division now and what are their commitments to rehabilitation or sentencing? The Division of Juvenile Justice (DJJ) has moved from the Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation to the Department of Youth and Community Restoration (DYCR) under the Department of Health and Human Services Agency. In addition, juvenile halls continue to be closed, including in San Francisco to create more rehabilitation centers for the youth.

Learning Objectives—Participants will be able to:

1. Discuss the legislative intent to move the Department of Juvenile Justice to the Department of Youth and Community Restoration under the California Health and Human Services Agency.
2. Discuss the legislative goal for the creation of the DYCR.
3. Describe the mechanical steps to this move and the practical implications.

◆ MCLE ◆ STC ✕ CIMCE CRC 5.664

The Youth Offender Program (YOP) was established through Assembly Bill (AB) 1276 (2014), which added Section 2905 to the California Penal Code (PC). PC 2905 provides CDCR with the authority to afford special classification consideration for youthful offenders received into CDCR, on or after July 1, 2015, who are under the age of 22 years. PC 2905 establishes a procedure by which CDCR assesses youthful offenders entering prison under the age of 22 allowing CDCR to classify these offenders at lower custody levels. The intent of the YOP is to identify youthful offenders and allow them greater access to programs with the goal of increasing the likelihood of rehabilitation during a critical developmental stage in their lives. PC 2905 requires CDCR to establish a Youthful Offender Institutional Classification Committee (ICC) at identified Reception Centers. The purpose of the Youthful Offender ICC review is to evaluate and assess a youthful offender's readiness for placement in a lower security level permitting increased access to programs and lessen the offender's interaction with negative influences found at higher custody level facilities. As required by AB 1276 and PC 2905, at least one staff member participating in the youthful offender ICC evaluation shall be specially trained in adolescent and young adult development. Training shall include, but not be limited to adolescent and young adult development and evidence-based interviewing processes employing positive and motivational techniques. This specialized training is for the purpose of understanding important neurological and developmental changes that occur in offenders who are in their late teens through early adulthood. During the presentation an in-depth discussion will address eligibility criteria, Reception Center processing, YOP Population at CDCR, YOP designated institutions, annual review process, and enhanced programing opportunities (education, job skills, and self-help groups).

The Young Women’s Freedom Center and the Youth Law Center will discuss their collaborative work to lift up the lived experiences of system-involved girls, young women, and Transgender/Gender Non-Confirming (TGNC) people and support their leadership in transforming these systems. In 2019, a youth-led team from the Young Women’s Freedom Center interviewed 100 system-involved women and TGNC people using a mixed-methods, life course survey interview. The aim of the project was to create a bricolage of the lives of San Francisco’s most marginalized communities and to explore how individuals navigate systems such as housing, foster care, and juvenile and adult justice. This workshop will engage participants in the process of centering the expertise of those who have lived experience. Workshop participants will learn about the Young Women’s Freedom Center’s Youth-led Participatory Action Research (YPAR) model - a model of inquiry that challenges dominate modes of academic knowledge-production, allowing the research team to engage young people as co-collaborators, rather than being the subjects of research. Participants will hear highlights from the research findings, and gain insight into the impact of structural violence experienced by system-involved girls, young women, and TGNC people. Finally, participants will gain strategies for incorporating these findings into their daily practice.

Learning Objectives—Participants will be able to:

1. Discuss youth-led participatory action research model as a tool for centering the lives of system-impacted girls, young women, and TGNC people.
2. Explain the violence experienced as a result of multisystemic involvement for girls, young women, and TGNC people, the barriers that experience creates, and apply those findings to daily work.

Over the past two years, policies impacting immigrant children have changed in profound and alarming ways. Enhanced immigration enforcement combined with a fear of engaging with social service agencies may lead to an increased risk of children in immigrant families entering the child welfare system. Recognizing the unique needs of this population, and drawing from our respective expertise in children's rights and immigration law, the National Center for Youth Law and Immigrant Legal Resource Center collaborated to create a toolkit for child welfare agencies on working with immigrant families. In this session, the panelists will share highlights from the toolkit, including best practices for working with detained or deported parents, identifying immigration relief options for children and families, using a trauma-informed approach, and collaborating with foreign consulates and embassies to achieve the best outcome for children and families.

Learning Objectives—Participants will be able to:

1. Understand how to identify a family's need for legal immigration services and how to support children and parents in obtaining immigration relief.
2. Articulate advocacy strategies to successfully engage and include detained or deported parents in child welfare proceedings.

fundamentally changed how county agencies operate together and approach case planning. Centered around the voice and choice of the child, youth, and family, the Child and Family Team (CFT) model is where structured decision making and consensus building among families, service providers, and county agencies occur. Additionally, evidence-based practices in child welfare and probation increasingly rely on family engagement and teaming processes as effective methods to support in the planning, delivery and management of necessary services. In July 2018, the Child and Adolescent Needs and Strengths (CANS) assessment tool was selected to be used by child welfare agencies within the CFT process to guide case planning and placement decisions. The CANS, as a communimetric tool, improves engagement between the child or youth, family members and participants within a CFT.

Learning Objectives—Participants will be able to:

1. Describe how the CFT process and CANS assessment tool informs case planning, service delivery, and placement to make well informed decisions that can be utilized during the court hearing process.
2. Describe how the CFT process builds consensus through team-decision making practices that honors the voice and choice of the child, youth, and family during the development of their case plan.
3. Discuss what approaches some courts have adopted to aid county agencies in overcoming information sharing barriers.
4. Identify and utilize within a court report CFT meeting minutes and action items that can be used to assist judges in their decision making.

◆ MCLE * BBS © PSY ✕ CIMCE CRC 5.210, 5.225, 5.242, 5.518

Approved on June 27, 2018, Assembly Bill 1810 set forth important legislation intended to address the unique needs of individuals in the criminal justice system who are struggling with mental health issues. The legislation created a mental health diversion program which will allow individuals to access treatment services in the community instead of facing incarceration. In addition, the legislation sets forth a grant program that will provide $100 million to county programs to divert defendants from jails to treatment services and provide resources to those suffering from certain mental health diseases. There are still many questions surrounding the implementation of the bill and what the outcomes will be because of it. This workshop hopes to answer some of those questions surrounding the bill as well as situate how the bill will look when implemented into the current systems in place.

Sustainable access to evidence-based substance use disorder (SUD) services in California is crucial for individuals and communities. California has been making substantial shifts in the delivery systems and increasing access across the state. In addition to redesigning the SUD services for Medi-Cal, the Department of Health Care Services (DHCS) is implementing over 40 projects pertaining to prevention, treatment, mental health services, and recovery services for individuals with an opioid use disorder. In this workshop, Marlies Perez from DHCS will discuss how California is reshaping how SUD services are provided in treatment facilities, counties, jails, hospitals and other critical settings. Dealing with legal issues in the courts is a stressful experience for most people. In addition, people frequently come to court while already coping with their own behavioral health challenges— mental wellness or substance abuse. How people may behave in court or during a mediation session—and our reaction to it—can also be affected by cultural differences. This workshop will explore techniques and culturally responsive approaches to effectively engage with people who may have behavioral health challenges.

Learning Objectives—Participants will be able to:

1. Identify techniques and strategies to serve clients with behavioral/mental health conditions.
2. Recognize steps to take when a litigant is not mentally/emotionally stable.
3. Describe some effective de-escalation strategies.
4. Compare behavioral health issues within juvenile law.

Foster Care Reform: A Discussion of the Impact of Waivers, Realignment, CCR, FFPSA, and the Courts

◆ MCLE ◆ STC ✕ CIMCE

For the past decade, California has been overhauling the child welfare system through a combination of federal waivers, realignment, and Continuum of Care Reform (CCR). These reforms have impacted nearly every aspect of our child welfare system including prevention, recruitment, retention, placement decisions, services, funding and supports available to children and families. Amid these reform efforts, Congress passed the Family First Prevention Services Act (FFPSA), a major overhaul of how the federal government funds child welfare programs with an emphasis on prevention, which has significant implications for California requiring us to pivot to address Family First without losing sight of the progress we've made in recent years.

Learning Objectives—Participants will be able to:

1. Describe the overview of the changes in the laws as they relate to FFPSA, CCR, realignment and waivers.
2. Explain the opportunities, challenges, and court's role that California has in preventative work and implementing the overall vision of foster care reform.
3. Develop access to necessary supports by discussing proposed legal remedies to make these reforms work in California before implementation.

◆ MCLE * BBS ◆ STC ✕ CIMCE CRC 5.210, 5.225, 5.242, 5.518, 5.664

Extracurricular activities can provide meaningful educational, social, and developmental advantages for children in the child welfare and juvenile justice systems. This workshop draws upon research, policies, programs, and best practices to demonstrate the importance of extracurriculars to young people.

Learning Objectives—Participants will be able to:

1. Identify the benefits of participation in extracurricular activities for children and youth in the juvenile court system.
2. Describe the legal principles that entitle and support youth in participating in extracurricular activities.
3. List the barriers to participation in extracurricular activities that young people in the juvenile court system face.
4. Design ways to change their practice to support access to extracurricular activities for children and youth in the juvenile court system.

5B. If You Text It, Will They Come?

◆ MCLE ✕ CIMCE CRC 10.478(b), 10.478(c)–(d)

How can we help litigants stay on track of hearings, deadlines, and other important procedures? Research from other domains like health and education point to the power of the text message. Preliminary pilots of text message reminders for criminal hearings or legal aid appointments suggest that simple reminder text messages can decrease failure to appear rates. Our team at Stanford University is conducting rigorous research to see if — and how — text messages can improve litigants' ability to navigate procedure. We have built a reminder system that integrates into different case management systems, to automatically send templated reminder messages or procedural coach messages to litigants. We're gathering evidence on whether and how these messages work. In this session, we will go over the current research, best practices, and case studies of text messaging systems.

Learning Objectives—Participants will be able to:

1. Develop and deploy a text message reminder system, procedural coach, or intake system.

5D. More to the Story: How the Economic Effects of DV Can Lead to Dangerous Custody Outcomes

◆ MCLE * BBS ✕ CIMCE CRC 5.210, 5.215, 5.225, 5.230, 5.242, 5.518, 5.660(d), 10.464, 10.478(b), 10.478(c)–(d)

The movement against domestic violence in the United States has long been focused on crisis intervention. At the centerpiece of the movement are shelters and restraining orders, resources meant to help survivors leave dangerous situations and keep their harm-doers away. This work is clearly needed. However, the crisis focus has led to a narrow understanding of domestic violence for those outside of the movement. That is, when people (including some judges, lawyers, and court personnel) think “domestic violence,” they often think of physical and psychological abuse only. Such a view has a particularly devastating blindspot: the significant economic impact of experiencing abuse. In this interactive workshop, FreeFrom will explore the costs of domestic violence, the nature and consequences of economic abuse, and how they can lead to dangerous custody outcomes in family cases. The workshop will also include guides on how to identify economic abuse and other economic effects of domestic violence and will offer recommendations for how judges and attorneys can use existing California law to ensure that custody determinations in these situations are truly in the best interest of the child.

Learning Objectives—Participants will be able to:

1. Describe economic abuse and the economic effects of domestic violence.

5E. Protecting the Financial Future of Foster Youth - A Guide to Addressing Foster Youth Identity Theft

◆ MCLE ✕ CIMCE

This workshop will host a discussion addressing the vulnerability of foster youth to identity theft as well as strategies for meeting the statutory requirement for public welfare agencies to provide and review credit reports to foster youth. It will outline the various models used for foster youth identity theft remediation and the distinct processes for assisting dependents and non-minor dependents. The workshop will also address the challenges of identifying and remediating identity theft, including accessing credit reports through the 3 major reporting agencies (CRAs). A case study will be analyzed and participants will be provided with resource materials and best practice guidelines.

Learning Objectives—Participants will be able to:

1. Summarize the statutory requirement for public welfare agencies to provide and review credit reports for foster youth.
2. Analyze the models used for foster youth identity theft remediation and review and case study.
3. Compare the process for assisting dependents and non-minor dependents.
4. Discuss the unique challenges of identifying and remediating foster youth ID theft.

5F. Resource Family Approval and the Transition to Adoption

◆ MCLE * BBS ✕ CIMCE CRC 5.242, 5.518

Join us for a brief overview of the Resource Family Approval (RFA) process and how a Resource Family transitions to adoption. This will be followed by a roundtable discussion to share thoughts, practices, and ask questions about the RFA process and pathway to adoptive placement through finalization with a Resource Family. This is an opportunity to hear how others are working through this process to meet the needs of children and families. As RFA continues to evolve, questions regarding the connection to other areas such as adoptions are emerging. This workshop will build an understanding of the necessary requirements for a Resource Family to adopt a child or youth in their care which should lead to improving the timeliness to permanency.

Learning Objectives—Participants will be able to:

1. Describe the RFA process and statewide efforts to decrease the application and approval timelines.

5G. Revisiting Juvenile Transfer: Where Are We Two Years After Prop 57?

◆ MCLE ◆ STC ✕ CIMCE CRC 5.664

Two years ago, the voters of the State of California enacted Prop 57 and did away with the prosecutor's ability to directly file serious juvenile delinquency cases in adult court. In the two years since implementation of Prop 57, the courts have addressed the standard of evidence required at a transfer hearing and the extent to which it is retroactive. In this workshop, participants will learn how juvenile transfer has taken shape in the past two years. Participants will also hear about how to approach and prepare for transfer hearings, and will share best practices.

Learning Objectives—Participants will be able to:

1. Discuss the standard of evidence required for a court to make a decision on a transfer case, as well as how best to present that evidence.
2. Describe the courts' holdings as to retroactivity.
3. Implement best practices that will ensure timely, thorough transfer hearings.
