I have reviewed the recommendations that have been made by those that have obviously spent a great deal of time and thoughtful consideration into making such recommendations for change. While there is always some apprehension with respect to what that change will actually bring, it is evident that the AOC can no longer function in the manner in which it has in the past. Adopting the recommendations would appear to be the first step towards positive change, remembering that the trial courts' collective voice should no longer be ignored but incorporated as a necessary component to this change.
