

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This report is a collaborative effort of the Center for Court Research, Innovation, and Planning of the California Administrative Office of the Courts (AOC) and Alex Aikman, an experienced trial court administrator, attorney, and judicial administration consultant.

Fredrick G. Miller, Senior Manager for the Center, has provided direction and full support for the effort. Richard A. Schaufler, Manager of the Research and Planning Unit in the Center, and project manager for this study, has guided this study with wisdom and insight.

Senior Research Analyst Jacquelyn Harbert was instrumental in devising a framework for the project's development in the early stages of this project. Her contribution in this regard was invaluable both for guiding the work and keeping it focused.

Staff of the Research and Planning Unit collected and organized all the case filing information. The tables and figures throughout this report are the indispensable result of their efforts. Staff also provided valuable critique throughout the writing of the report. The authors deeply appreciate the fine work and unwavering support of Chris Belloli, Francine Byrne, Dag MacLeod, Sonya Smith, Kristin Nichols, Melissa Levitt, and Shaunese Henderson.

Thanks also goes to AOC librarian Gary Kitajo and library staff member Paul Zolli. Both responded to the authors' requests for research materials with astonishing promptness and thoroughness.

In addition to the Center for Court Research, Innovation, and Planning, other staff members of the Administrative Office of the Courts gave freely of their time and expertise to help the authors understand the factors that have influenced filings during the period studied. The authors want to especially thank Frank Hellum from the Information Service Division for his help with data reports obtained from the Judicial Branch Statistical Information System (JBSIS).

Special thanks to Neal Kauder, VisualResearch, Inc., for his assistance developing visuals that effectively illustrate the information in this report. His encouragement to simplify and break data down into small multiples resulted in graphs and charts we believe facilitate a better understanding of caseload and workload trends.

Finally, the authors want to thank Administrative Director of the Courts William C. Vickrey and Chief Deputy Administrative Director Ron G. Overholt for recognizing the value of this work, and for their unwavering support.
